For twice-weekly service

Backdoor trash pickup to cost residents more

by BILL HILL

When a 53 cent increase takes effect Jan. 1, Arlington Heights residents will pay from $1 to $2 a month more than persons in surrounding communities for garbage service.

The reason: Arlington Heights village policy requires twice weekly pickup at the backdoor while residents of other local suburbs use curbside pickup at about half the price.

Although the exclusive contract signed in November 1973 with Laseke Disposal Co. is expensive, the people of Arlington Heights like the service, said George Weinand, village health director.

"THE BACKDOOR pickup is a deluxe service done for aesthetic reasons," Weinand said. "It was felt by the village board that with the character of the village that backdoor pickup is preferred to having cans out at the curb. The twice weekly clause was put in by us for technical rather than aesthetic reasons. We felt it was necessary for health reasons.

Residents also like not having to carry the cans to and from the curb, Weinand said.

The extra cost for the convenience of backdoor pickup is obvious. For twice weekly, curb service, Wheeling residents pay only $4.50 a month and Buffalo Grove residents pay only $4.90.

The rates are even lower in villages where garbage is only picked up once a week. In Des Plaines and Palatine the monthly charge for this type of service is $3 and in Elk Grove Village it costs $3.50. In Mount Prospect the charge is $4.30 per home but the village picks up the tab.

Trash rates in other towns

Backdoor service twice weekly:

Municipality	Monthly Charge	Limits?	Extra Charges?
LaGrange	$5	Yes	No
Lombard	5.25	Yes	No
Arlington Heights	5.92	No	No
Clarendon Hills	6	Yes	Yes
Downers Grove	6	Yes	Yes
Western Springs	6.25	Yes	No
Glen Ellyn	6.50	Yes	No
Northbrook	6.50	Yes	Yes
Glenview	7.10	No	No
Deerfield	7.51	No	No

Rolling Meadows residents enjoy free city garbage pickup. There the cost is handled through general revenue funds.

Though Arlington Heights residents pay a significantly higher rate to receive the twice weekly backdoor service, it is a lower rate than in most suburban communities receiving a similar level of services.

A refuse collection survey conducted by the City of Napervile shows that rates in most communities with twice weekly, backdoor service are at least $6 and go as high as $7.51 in Deerfield.

The Naperville survey also points out that unlike Arlington Heights, in many of these villages limits are put on the number and weight of containers that will be picked up. In some of these communities there are also extra charges for the disposal of very large items, such as furniture.

OF MORE THAN 40 communities polled, only 10 contracted for twice weekly, backdoor service. Only LaGrange at $5 and Lombard at $5.25 have lower rates than Arlington Heights. But there are certain limitations enforced. Lombard residents may set out no more than three 20-gallon containers nd LaGrance patrons are limited to two 30-pound cans.

In some other communities, once-a-week, backdoor service is more expensive than the twice-weekly pickup in Arlington Heights. The Village of Hoffman Estates pays $6.28 a month for each household receiving the backdoor pickup, and Palatine residents choosing backdoor service will soon pay $6.40 each month because of rate hikes approved in November.

Municipality	Cost	Service	No. of Pickups

Pearl Harbor

Area man relates painful memories of the morning all hell broke loose

by Mike Klein

Saturday

Hell came alive.

Its ugly wrath appeared from beyond the horizon, swooped down in a flood of anger and disappeared less than two hours later.

Each minute seemed an hour. Each hour seemed an eternity. Those who survived could only wonder when it would end. For many, it was the end.

The stench of burning fuel, the screams of dying men and the never-ending explosions. It was all around them.

A line of defense was offered. But the Americans were mostly helpless victims to a military plot so successful that even its Japanese instigators were taken back.

IT WAS SUNDAY morning, Dec. 7, 1941.

The men who were staioned at Pearl Harbor will never forget.

Bill Hartman of Wheeling has read of the great massacre which began World War II. He has viewed the motion picture "Tora! Tora! Tora!" Hartman says it's very realistic.

That was the Pearl Harbor which he knew, too.

"I was coming from the mess hall when I spotted the planes," said Hartman, then a third class gunner's mate on the U.S.S. Honolulu.

The bright Pacific sun shone brightly upon Pearl Harbor that morning. Hartman would again spend his day testing the Navy's new 20-and 40-millimeter guns.

AS THEY WALKED from mess hall quarters, the gunner's mates thought little of the approaching planes. They were always flying around. It figured to be another drill.

"This particular Sunday morning, I noticed the red circles on the planes and thought, 'What-the-hell, that's being realistic!'" Hartman said Friday afternoon 34 years later.

The young Americans were not alarmed even after the Japanese zeros flew overhead without incident.

Then all hell broke loose. Men began dying by the hundreds and thousands on Ford's Island. The

Many an odd license plate verboten with Howlett

by JILL BETTNER

Illinois Sec. of State Michael J. Howlett doesn't go for a lot of the funny letters and numbers people request every year on their license plates.

You won't see SEX 42, LSD or even WOW, although the combinations are among those most often requested. They don't elicit even a chuckle from the man who has the final word on all special bids for unusual letters and numbers on our plates.

"I guess you might say Mr. Howlett is a very conservative man when it comes to handling special requests," said George Kreker, supervisor of public information for the secretary of state's office.

"THERE MGHT BE nothing wrong with some things — LSD came from a doctor who unfortunately just happened to have those initials — but he won't allow anything that might have a double meaning," Kreker said.

Kreker said special requests start arriving at the Springfield office about July every year by the truckload. This year, it took between 200 and 300 workers just to open and sort all the requests for specific license combinations received by the Sept. 30 deadline.

"Just handling reassignments for people who want to keep what they have is a tremendous job and with all the interest in the three-letter combinations, we really have our hands full," he said.

Related story on Sect. 2 Page 10

The office first made three-letter combinations available in 1974, and each year the requests for them have grown. About 3,600 different combinations were available for 1976 plates.

Kreker said he feels the Bicentennial has something to do with the record number of requests received this year. Most likely, he said, people want their initials on the special plates to keep as souvenirs.

AMONG FIRST names that motorists most often ask for are Ron, Tim, Tom, Pam, Pat, Sue and Joe. About 900 cars throughout the state will be displaying these plates. A lot of organizations request initials, too, and of these, VFW and ELK are most popular.

"The only problem with requests like these are that everybody wants just the letters," Kreker said. Only one plate in each series features only the name, with the others beginning SUE 1, SUE 2 and so on.

Plates promoting Chicago baseball teams are big, with several hundred issued this year that say CUB or SOX.

"The first year we get a request for something like that we make 50 or if we anticipate it will be really popular, we might make 100," Kreker said.

Apparently feelkng left out, Bulls fans and people with four-and five-letter names have inundated the secretary of state's office with pleas to increase the number of letters on license plates.

"We get many many requests for four-and five-letter combinations, but I see nothing to indicate that we'll make a change to that in the near future," Kreker said. "We have about all we can take care of right now with just the three-letter combinations."

Machinists strike United Air Lines

Machinists struck United Air Lines Friday night when contract negotiations broke down between the union and management for the nation's largest airlines. Kenneth Thiede, recording secretary for International Assn. of Machinists Local 1487, Des Plaines, said the strike started at 11:01 p.m. Thiede said pickets would be set up at United headquarters in Elk Grove Township, O'Hare Airport and at airline ticket offices in Chicago. He added the strike would likely shut the airline down entirely. However, a few flights may be flown to bring airline personnel to their home base. Approximately 2,700 of the 5,000 IAW Chicago area members are United employes, according to Thiede. IAW officials estimate 18,000 machinists will be idled by the strike, while United officials place the number of machinists at 16,770. IAW represents flight dispatchers, mechanics, ramp and food personnel. Union members have been working without a contract since Oct. 31 when the previous 26-month pact expired. Negotiations between the airline and the union were being conducted by the National Mediation Board, which previously imposed a 30-day cooling off period.

Thiede said that wages, pensions, donations, insurance, the cost-of-living clause and "scope" clause to determine which work is performed by members are among the bargaining issues. No information was available on the length of the contract currently being negotiated. Under the previous contract, machinists earned $7.84 an hour. A spokesman for United Airlines in Elk Grove Township said reservation representatives would notify passengers of any strike.

Narrow miss for 2 jets

Two 727's came within 300 feet of each other while making an approach landing at O'Hare Airport Friday night. No one was hurt. FAA spokesman Neal Callahan said TWA Flight 403 from Cleveland overtook United Flight 291 from Providence, R.I., at 21,000 feet, approximately 60 miles northeast of O'Hare at 6:39 p.m. Callahan said the TWA pilot reported to the air traffic control center that he came up behind the United aircraft and saw it about 300 feet in front of him. He took immediate evasive action by turning left and descending about 100 feet. The United flight carried 53 passengers and the TWA plane carried 70, said a United Airlines spokesman. Both landed without further incident at O'Hare, Callahan said. The United spokesman said, "Our guy was just sitting there, and the other plane came at him. The TWA plane took the evasive action, he went down to the left. No one was hurt, our bird didn't move.

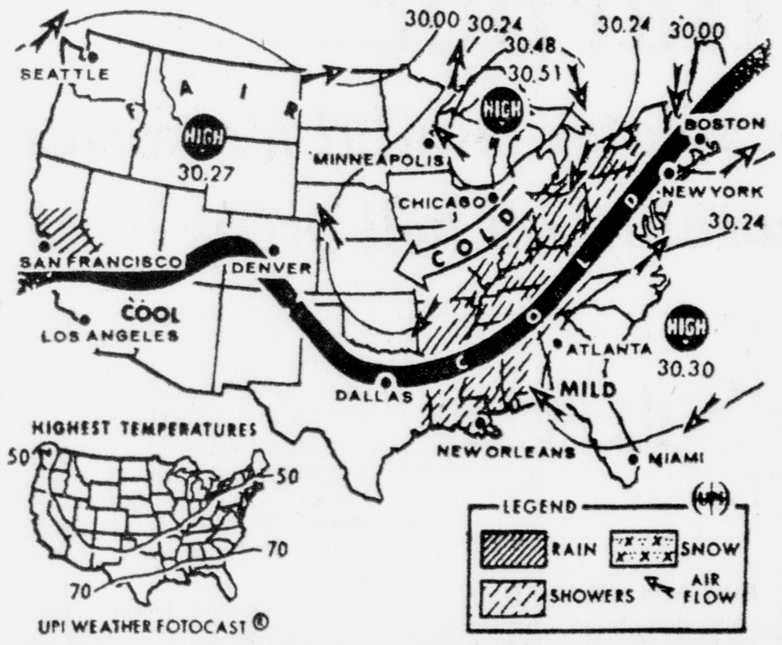

Urbana hires area fire chief

Elk Grove Village Fire Chief Allen W. Hulett Friday was named fire chief of the City of Urbana. The appointment is expected to be confirmed Dec. 15 by the Urbana City Council. Hulett became the center of a controversy that gained national attention in 1974 when Jean Pettee and her unborn child died. An Elk Grove Village ambulance dispatched to the Pettee house was called back by Hulett because the family lived in an unincorporated area and did not have a service contract with the village. Elk Grove firemen called the Roselle Fire Dept. to the Pettee house.

Decriminalized pot law in Chicago

Two aldermen proposed an amendment to Chicago's municipal code Friday which would decriminalize possession of an ounce or less of marijuana. Aldermen Dennis H. Block and Ross Lathrop said during a news conference that they soon would introduce the ordinance to the full city council. The new law would "realistically deal with the fact that use of marijuana is a widespread social phenomenon," Lathrop said. The amendment would classify marijuana possession as a misdemeanor punishable by a fine between $50 and $250.

For Democrats

Delegate selection back to court?

by STEVE BROWN

The Illinois Board of Elections will decide Sunday if it plans to toss the issue of how the Democratic Party selects its delegates for the national convention back to the Illinois Supreme Court.

The Supreme Court Friday told the board to determine by Monday if it would accept a Democratic plan, which does not conform to the present state law, but reportedly is acceptable to the Democratic National Committee.

Lawyers for the Democratic State Central Committee asked the court to uphold a petition accepting the plan. A plan must be presented to the elections board Monday as to how the party will certify its convention delegates.

THE DEMOCRATIC plan would take 14 delegates away from suburban Cook County and Downstate areas and give them to Mayor Richard J. Daley. Gov. Daniel Walker and the Committee on Illinois Government both attempted to intervene in the Supreme Court hearing and challenge the Democrats' plan, but the court blocked the move. The committee was formed by Walker aide Victor DeGrazia several years ago.

Illinois Atty. Gen. William Scott urged the court not get involved in political matters.

Franklin Lunding, the chairman of the elections board said a decision would be made Sunday, but he declined to predict which way the board would go on the matter. If the board decides it will not accept the plan then the Supreme Court will have to rule in the case.

Forces loyal to Daley attempted to get a bill passed in the Illinois General Assembly this fall that would have made the plan law but legislators supporting Walker killed the move. Faley forces also buried a Walker-backed plan.

A TOUCH OF irony was added to the court argument because Raymond Simon, attorney for the central committee, cited the 1972 U.S. Supreme Court decision which led to Daley and 58 other delegates being bared from the convention.

Friday's court battle seemed to suggest that the Illinois delegation may face the credentials challenge at next year's convention in Kansas City regardless of the court decision.

Walker forces will probably contest the delegate selection process. Attorneys for the governor contended the present state law was in "substantial conformity with party rules."

Attorneys for the Committee on Illinois Government predicted the case would go to the U.S. Supreme Court as it did in 1972 because of the current dispute.

BEFORE THE Supreme Court hearing, a spokesman for the elections board said the board would abide by the decision of the court. Sources close to board members did not expect the court to toss the matter back to them for review before making a decision.

The plan that was presented to the court would give the 10th Congressional District, which includes Des Plaines, seven delegates to the 1976 convention, the same number it had in 1972, but the 12th Congressional District would have six delegates, one less than in 1972.

The plan Daley forces are pushing would give the Mayor control of about 80 of the state's 169 delegates. Current state law would call for the election of 59 delegates from eight congressional districts wholly within Cook County plus another 14 chosen on an at large basis.

Illinois primary vote critical to Ford

by STEVE BROWN

President Gerald R. Ford's two chief Illinois campaign managers, former Gov. Richard Ogilvie and U.S. Sen. Charles Percy, R-Ill., both have indicated the state's March 16 primary is critical to Ford's reelection efforts.

Ogilvie said Republicans who desert the party to vote in the Democratic primary will be helping Ford's chief opponent former California Gov. Ronald Reagan.

Percy said Ford must win the Illinois primary if he hopes to capture the GOP nomination.

"If Ford can't win in Illinois, he can't win in the nation," Percy said. Although Percy said he thought Ford could beat Reagan in the primary, he added the president must begin to adopt policies and principles that will be more consistent with the party being the centrist party in the mainstream of American thought, Percy said.

OGILVIE ALSO predicted Ford could beat Reagan in the state and went so far as to predict the president could finish off Reagan's presidential bid here in March.

The pair's comments on the president's reelection bid came in separate interviews. Ogilvie taped a radio interview in Chicago while Percy talked to reporters in Washington.

Ogilvie charged Reagan supporters missed a golden opportunity to gain additional delegates for the party's national convention recently by allowing state Republican leaders to adopt a plan which would call for only five of the party's 101 delegates to the national convention to be selected on an at-large basis.

However, Reagan supporters disputed Ogilvie's contention. State Sen. David Regner, R-Mount Prospect, Reagan's northern Illinois coordinator, Friday said he is satisfied with the present plan which allows four delegates and four alternates to be elected in each congressional district. Only five delegates will be selected at-large.

REGNER SAID if the plan calling for 29 at-large delegates would have been adopted, Percy and Ogilvie probably would have selected delegates pledged to Ford.

"I think the voice of the people will speak on this and Reagan will gain," he added. Regner added he would prefer a system in which all delegates were elected.

While admitting that Ford is not a dynamic candidate, Ogilvie said, "The people have had enough charisma and are looking for a good solid guy."

Percy predicted that a Reagan victory in the national convention could spell disaster for the party in 1976.

Both men said the Illinois primary which is the fourth in the nation and the first Midwest state, is a key primary because the people of the state represent a broad cross section of the views of the country.

3 more bodies found in S.C.

Three more bodies were found in shallow graves Friday near Florence, S.C., bringing to six the total uncovered in a remote swamp. Officials said they believed all were persons reported missing from the North Charleston area 60 miles away. Three bodies were discovered Thursday, and police uncovered the other three while sifting the earth for evidence Friday. They included four males and two females. Late Friday, a spokesman for the state Law Enforcement Division said police had found another "suspicious looking" area in the swamp and a search would continue Saturday.

Amtrak to raise fares 5-10%

Passenger train fares will rise 5 to 10 per cent on most routes over the next two months, Amtrak announced Friday. The first round of increases will be Dec. 15 when fares will go up for most unreserved, short-distance trains such as standard trains in the Washington-Boston corridor. Fares on the high-speed Metroliner remained unchanged. The second set of fare hikes is set to take effect Feb. 1 with increases in most coach fares and some first class fares on long-distance trains.

Senate passes bill to aid N.Y.

The Senate voted to silence opponents Friday, then passed and sent to President Ford a bill he proposed to save New York City from bankruptcy with up to $2.3 billion in federal loans. Opponents used parliamentary tactics to stall approval after the Senate voted, 70-27, to impose cloture, limiting each senator to only an hour's oratory. The bill was passed by the House, 213-203, Tuesday.

China gives back remains of two pilots

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Chinese are returning the ashes of two American Navy men shot down during the Vietnam War and have confirmed for the first time the deaths of two Americans during a CIA mission in 1952, it was announced Friday.

The Chinese also confirmed the capture and later release of three other Americans. But they were unable to provide information on about 20 other missing persons on a list submitted by U.S. officials.

The Pentagon and the State Dept. listed the two Navy men as Lt. Cmdr. James L. Buckley of Sioux City, Iowa, shot down Aug. 21, 1967, and Kenneth W. Pugh, a chief parachute rigger from Lancaster, Calif., who died April 12, 1966.

Also mentioned was Cmdr. Robert Flynn, who was downed with Buckley and released in 1973.

The Chinese also reported that the bodies of pilot Robert C. Snoddy, of Roseburg, Ore., and co-pilot Norman A. Schwartz, of Louisville, Ky., were buried near where their C-47 was show down on a CIA mission over China on Nov. 29, 1952.

Officials said the Chinese had sought since to find their bodies, but without success.

The other names on the list are those of CIA employes John T. Downey and Richard G. Fecteau, who were along on the C-47 flight seeking to pick up agents who had been dropped into China. They were captured and imprisoned by the Chinese.

Fecteau was released Dec. 13, 1971, after serving most of a 20-year term. Downey, now a student at the Harvard Law School, was released March 12, 1973, after President Richard M. Nixon publicly acknowledged that he had been on a CIA mission.

State Dept. spokesman John H. Trattner said the Chinese reported they had no information regardng the 20 other missing Americans.

VIEW OF LANDFILL and dump in Jersey City, N.J., where the FBI believes the body of former Teamsters boss Jimmy Hoffa may be buried. Excavation of the area has not begun yet.

Witness in Hoffa case to view lineup

DETROIT (UPI) — Federal sources said Friday that early indictments in the James R. Hoffa disappearance case depend largely on whether a mystery witness recognizes three New Jersey men at a court-ordered identification lineup today.

"If he can identify them," a federal investigator said, "we may ask the grand jury to return indictments next week."

The mystery man, federal authorities said, witnessed the abduction of the former Teamsters International boss July 30. The lineup was set up, officials said, to see if the witness can identify the three men as Hoffa's abductors.

Law enforcement sources in Jersey City, N.J., said Friday the FBI has been searching a 47-acre landfill area under a highway overpass as part of the Hoffa investigation.

The FBI obtained a search warrant Tuesday to check the dump for the body of Armand Faugno, a New Jersey racketeer who vanished three years ago. The Long Island, N.Y., newspaper Newsday said Friday federal sources told it the search for Faugno was a "smokescreen" in the FBI's hunt for Hoffa's body.

The federal grand jury in Detroit began hearing testimony again Thursday after several weeks' lull in its probe into the disappearance of Hoffa who led the powerful union for 13 years until he resigned in 1971 while in federal prison.

The lineup was ordered Thursday by U.S. District Court Judge James P. Churchill. It was scheduled for today in Oakland County, where Hoffa lived and where he vanished.

Robert E. Ozer, head of the U.S. Organized Crime Strike Task Force in Detroit, told Churchill a second mystery man named the three New Jersey men as "active participants" in the abduction and murder of the former Teamster chief.

The trio, identified as Salvatore A. Briguglio, 47, of Paramus, his brother Gabriel, 36; and Thomas A. Andretta, 38, of Hasbrouck Heights, were described as Teamsters with close toes to organized crime figures.

They and Andretta's brother, Stephen, appeared briefly before the grand jury Thursday. Their lawyer said they all pleaded the Fifth Amendment against self-incrimination.

Briguglio was described as an associate of Anthony "Tony Pro" Provenzano, one of three men Hoffa told his family he planned to meet for lunch the day he vanished from outside a suburban Detroit restaurant.

U.S. jobless rate takes sharp drop

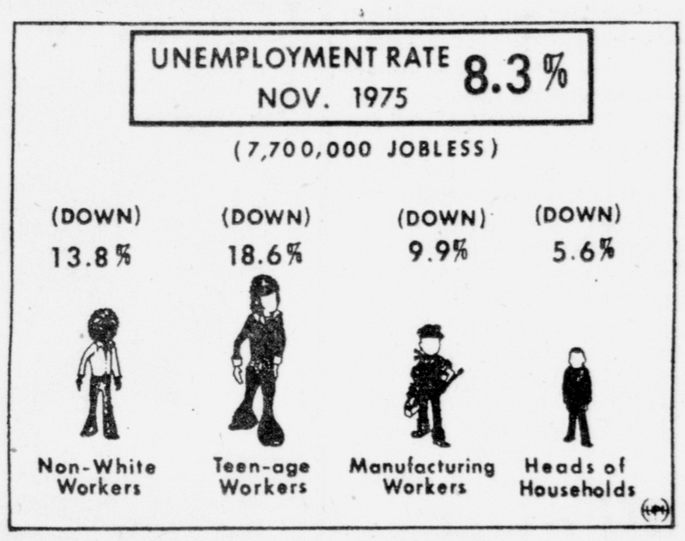

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Unemployment fell 0.3 per cent in November — the sharpest decline in six months — because of recalls of laid off family men and a big decline in job seekers, the Labor Dept. reported Friday.

The decline, down to 8.3 per cent of the U.S. work force, balanced off a 0.3 per cent October increase. And it contributed to a promising economic picture drawn Thursday in a report showing that wholesale prices had remained unchanged in November.

But the over-all figures masked some ominous aspects in the November job market — including a slight decline in total employment, an all-time high of 16.8 weeks in the average length of unemployment and a cooling in the recent surge of factory hiring.

Sen. Hubert Humphrey, head of the Joint Economic Committee, noted that despite many fluctuations the jobless rate has been holding at a virtual plateau for the last five months. November's decline was the biggest since joblessness fell from its recession peak of 9.2 per cent in May to 8.6 per cent in June.

Adult males, teen-agers and full-time workers benefited most in November as the number of unemployed dropped 300,000 to 7.7 million. The total number of employed persons nonetheless declined slightly to 85.3 million.

Lured by what Humphrey described as the "rose-colored glasses of recovery," the number of available jobseekers increased rapidly in recent months and went up 230,000 in October. But that trend also broke in November, when the total number of available workers dropped abruptly by 460,000.

Julius Shiskin, head of the Bureau of Labor Statistics, told Humphrey's committee that many people may have left the work force in November because their extended unemployment benefits ran out and they were no longer required to seek a job.

Noting a sharp decline in the number of unemployed persons who had been fired or laid off from their last job, Shiskin added: "What seems to be going on here is that the people who lost their jobs are getting them back" — particularly white married men and heads of households.

Unemployment among adult men dropped from 0.2 per cent to 6.9 per cent in November, an improvement that was mirrored in statistics for married men and heads of households. Joblessness among teen-agers also fell 1.3 per cent, but remained high at 18.6 per cent. The decline in joblessness to 7.6 per cent among white workers paralleled the overall monthly trend, but unemployment among blacks remained steady at a three-month level of 13.8 per cent. Unemployment among women held steady at 7.8 per cent.

Jobless rate in Chicago area remains 10%

The number of jobless dropped slightly in Illinois in November, but the Chicago unemployment rate ramained unchanged, state officials said Friday.

The unemployment rate for the six-county Chicago metropolitan area remained at about 10.2 per cent even though there were 4,000 fewer persons collecting unemployment compensation in November than October. The rate remains nearly double for the same time last year.

The unemployment rate for the entire state dipped slightly from 9.9 per cent in October to 9.5 per cent last month.

State officials said the decrease in the unemployment rate can be linked to a temporary increase in jobs in the building-trade industry.

Donald A. Johnson, director of the Illinois Dept. of Labor, said there were 475,000 Illinois residents out of work in November, but the total represented about 25,000 fewer jobless workers than in October.

"The unemployment decline can be explained partially by a temporary increase in employment by the building trades sector," Johnson said.

Officials in the Chicago metropolitan area said the number of jobless was lower despite scattered layoffs in apparel and heavy machinery firms.

While the Chicago area rate remained nearly unchanged, most other major population centers around the state saw a decrease in the number of unemployed.

The unemployment rate in Rockford, Bloomington-Normal, Springfield, East St. Louis, Champaign-Urbana, and Peoria dropped between 0.2 per cent and 1 per cent. The rate for the Quad Cities areas remained at 7.1 per cent, state officials said.

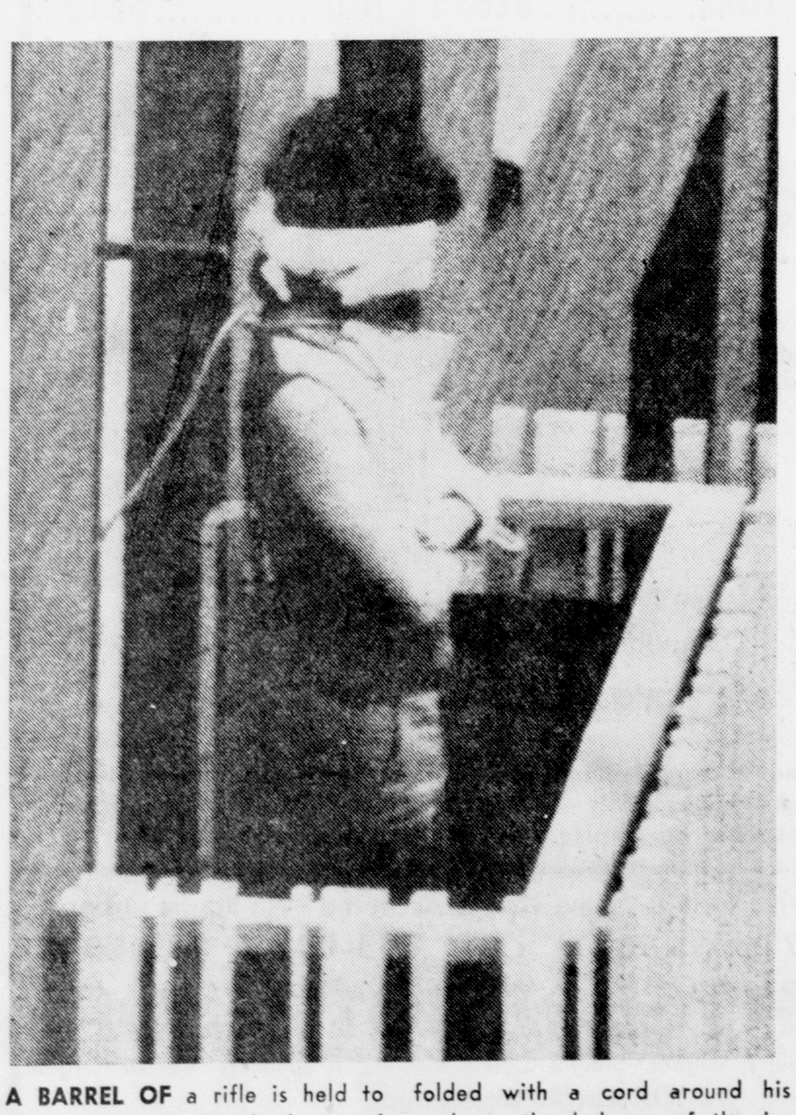

While the number of unemployed remained at about 475,000, state officials also announced that a new formula for computing unemployment compensation will be implemented in January that should provide increased benefits.

The new formula ties the benefits to the average statewide weekly wage which is computed twice a year by the Dept. of Labor.

The change results from legislation passed last spring.

The new formula will increase benefits for unemployed singles from $97 to $103 per week and for married persons with non-working spouses from $116 to $123 per week.

The maximum weekly benefits the state will pay for married persons with children will remain unchanged at $123 per week.

A BARREL OF a rifle is held to the back of the head of one of the hostages, an Indonesian man, as he is forced to stand blindfolded with a cord around his neck on the balcony of the Indonesian consulate in Amsterdam Friday.

Moluccan terrorist hurt in blast on hijacked train

BEILIN, NETHERLANDS (UPI) — An explosion aboard a hijacked Dutch train Friday seriously injured a terrorist Indonesian gunman and slightly wounded one of 35 hostages being held for a fourth day.

The pair were carried by two terrorists to a railroad crossing where an ambulance took them to a hospital.

Hospital officials said the explosion might have been caused by a grenade.

In Amsterdam, 75 miles south, another squad of terrorists holding 19 persons in the Indonesian consulate forced several hostages with nooses around their necks onto a balcony to back a demand for release of 25 jailed guerrillas.

The Amsterdam terrorists released seven children in two groups through the efforts of mediators and promised to free all the children soon.

"We don't fight against children," the terrorists were quoted by police as saying.

Both groups of terrorists are Moluccan separatists fighting for the independence of the Molucca Islands from Indonesia, a former Dutch colony.

There were no immediate details on the cause of the explosion aboard the hijacked train, but a railroad spokesman said it could not have been caused by railway equipment.

Authorities speculated that the gunmen — believed to be a group of seven or eight — had explosives in addition to submachineguns, a rifle and a pistol.

A hospital official told authorities the injuries to the two men could have been caused by a grenade explosion.

A captive doctor aboard the train said two other persons were injured slightly but that he was able to take care of them. About 1,000 police and troops are stationed only a few hundred yards from the stalled train that was hijacked Tuesday as it rolled through the grassy farmland crisscrossed with canals.

Two hostages were killed when the train was seized and a third was shot to death when authorities refused to allow the gunmen safe passage out of the country.

Doctors and medical orderlies Friday removed the bodies from the railroad embankment where they were hurled by the gunmen.

In Amsterdam, the seven gunmen twice pushed blindfolded hostages onto the rainy third-floor balcony, electric cords looped around their necks and guns held to their backs.

Each time it looked as if they planned to shove the hostages from the balcony, but each time they hauled them back inside.

One was held in the drizzling rain for more than an hour.

About 150 Dutch national police guarded the streets for two to three blocks around the consulate as authorities negotiated with the gunmen by telephone.

At a news conference in the Hague, Premier Joop Den Uyl said the government was maintaining its refusal to meet the gunmen's demands, which included the immediate release of some 15 South Moluccans held for offenses linked to their campaign for independence.

Property reassessment in '76

by AL MESSERSCHMIDT

Property owners in Wheeling and Palatine townships will face Cook County's quadrennial reassessment next year and Assessor Thomas Tully will be armed with up-to-date information about property improvements.

Two and a half years of study, two mailed questionnaires and follow-up, door-to-door interviews have sketched a recent picture of remodeled attics, new garages and basement recreation rooms for Tully's staff.

But, recent warnings that as many as 200,000 property owners face "hefty" assessment and real estate tax increases for failure to cooperate in the study are "misleading," said Dennis Dunne, Tully's director of communications.

"WE'RE LOOKING for accuracy," Dunne said.

Tully's staff began a door-to-door search for assessment information last summer of 35,000 homes in assessment quadrant one which includes Palatine and Wheeling townships.

The 35,000 property owners failed to respond to two mailed surveys which asked 28 questions about property improvements.

"There was no penalty if you didn't return the questionnaire," Dunne said Friday. "We weren't looking for ways to increase assessments of people who didn't respond."

NEARLY 78 per cent of county property owners returned the mailed questionnaires, Dunne said. A spot-check of the information found 92 per cent accuracy.

Some property owners called the questionnaires an "invasion of property," Dunne said. Others failed to return answers because "they didn't understand what it was."

Dunne refused to estimate how many property owners dodged the questionnaire to conceal improvements like driveways, additional rooms and central air-conditioning which could boost taxes.

The 35,000 property owners became information targets because quadrant one will be reassessed in 1976. Nearly 170,000 other parcels will be "picked up within the next year," Dunne said.

"WE BEGIN BY knocking on doors with the questionnaire in hand. If the property owner is not home, we conduct an exterior canvass and possibly talk to the neighbors," he said.

"We don't peek in windows. We don't want to get shot at," he added.

The questionnaires and canvass provide "preliminary" information which will be used whe the reassessment begins in February, Dunne said.

"The questionnaire or inspection won't automatically jack up your taxes. It works both ways. We have found some people who didn't have air-conditioning but were taxed for it," he said.

"IF THERE ARE concealments it could increase the assessment," he said.

Last year, Tully proposed legislation to allow home improvements of $15,000 or less without increasing assessments for four years after completion. Gov. Daniel Walker signed the proposal into law Aug. 28, 1975.

Some home improvement projects built in 1975 may be exempt from assessment increases.

When Tully proposed the assessment exemption, he outlined the tax cost of a home addition:

- A finished, basement recreation room costing $2,400 could add $28 in yearly real estate taxes;
- A new, two-car brick garage costing $3,780 could add $46 a year in taxes;
- A small $750 bathroom addition could add $10 in yearly taxes;
- A finished attic, costing $8,820,could boost taxes $105 a year.

Homeowers in other sections of Cook County, including Maine, Schaumburg and Elk Grove townships can file completed questionnaires with the assessor's office because reassessments are scheduled between 1977 and 1979, Dunne said.

Market closes worst week in year

NEW YORK (UPI) — The stock market Friday concluded its worst week in more than a year as concerns about the economy and Federal Reserve Board policies chilled early buying on the New York Stock Exchange.

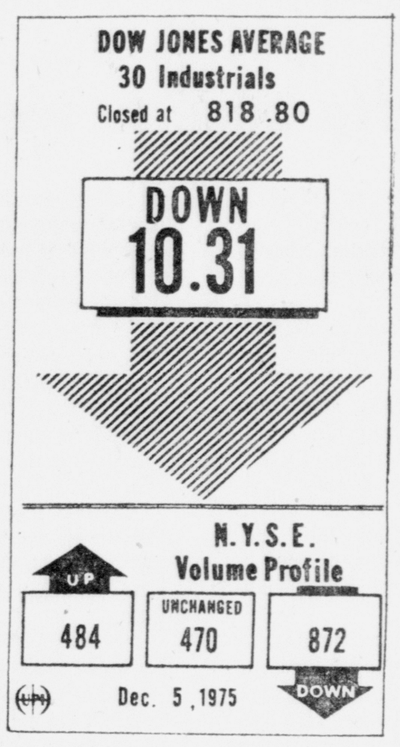

Trading was light Friday as the Dow Jones industrial average suffered a 10.31-point setback to 818.80, giving it a loss for the week of 41.87 points. It was the worst weekly setback since the Dow fell 48.81 points the week ending Sept. 27, 1974.

Standard & Poor's 500-stock index lost 1.02 to 86.82 and the average price of an MYSE common share decreased by 32 cents. Declines topped advances, 872 to 484, among the 1,826 issues crossing the tape. The 470 unchanged issues reflected investor uncertainty.

VOLUME TOTALED 14,050,00 shares, down from the 16,380,000 traded Thursday.

Wall Street's concerns about a slowdown in the economy, which resulted in heavy selling earlier this week, continued to grow. The Fed reported consumer credit rose $898 million in October, down sharply from the $1.43 billion level in September.

This report further demonstrated the economy's slowdown. The Commerce Department has reported two consecutive monthly declines in its index of leading economic indicators.

Initial buying was attributed to the Labor Department's report the nation's unemployment rate declined 0.3 per cent in November. But observers noted the 8.3 per cent rate was the same as that of September and was considered high.

Avon Products, the most active Big Board issue, plunged 5-1/8 points to 36-5/8 on 306,700 shares, including a block of 130,000 shares at 36¼. The company and Monarch Capital agreed to a merger plan. Some analysts said investors apparently were not happy with the diversification move by Avon.

BANKING ISSUES came under selling pressure in the wake of a Wall Street Journal article saying analysts believed the prospects for the institutions with multinational interest were dim because of slow foreign economic recoveries.

Citicorp, parent of Citibank, was the second most active Big Board issue, off 1-1/8 to 27 on 160,200 shares. J. P. Morgan lost 1-3/8 to 48-5/8, Bankers Trust 1-7/8 to 26 and Manufacturers Hanover ¾ to 27.

Glamors were hard hit. Polaroid was the third most active issue, falling 1½ to 31-7/8 on 138,000 shares. IBM plunged 5½ to 214-5/8, Digital Equipment 3¼ to 125, MCA Inc. 2½ to 63-7/8 and Xerox 2-1/8 to 47¼.

Prices closed lower in moderate trading on the American Stock Exchange. The average price of an AMEX share decreased four cents. Volume totaled 1,603,000 shares, compared with 1,826,000 traded Thursday.

'Tough' horseman's really a softy for kids

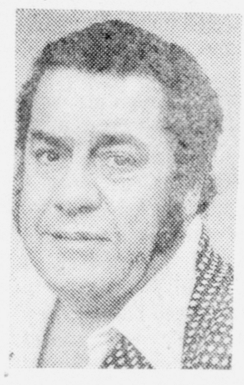

by JOE SWICKARD

Santa Claus doesn't always ride in a sleigh; for the residents of Maryville Academy his transportation is a midnight blue Cadillac deVille.

The driver of that car is Ernie Poulos of Arlington Heights who puts together a party for residents of the children's home in Des Plaines and makes sure they have a Christmas to remember.

Consider, for a moment, throwing a dinner party for 300 youngsters featuring Big Bird, magician Marshall Brodine, Cookie the Clown and Lana Turner. Then think about making sure the children get coats, pants, skates, bikes, footballs and assorted stocking stuffers.

DO ALL THIS because "that's my Christmas present" and you have some idea about Poulos.

Ernie Poulos

Poulos, operator of a successful racing stable and a long-time area resident, said he often thought about Maryville Academy, a home for wards of the state.

"I'd say to myself that when I was able to, I was going to do something for them. Then one day about five years ago I was riding in my car and heard over the radio that they needed some used ice skates," Poulos said.

Most people would hunt through the garage or attic for outgrown skates. Poulos telephoned the Rev. John Smyth, Maryville's director.

"He told me they had about 20 skates so far, and I asked how many they needed. He said they needed about 150 so I went out and bought them," he said.

THE ICE SKATES were just the start of his relation with the academy. In the summer he helps with the Chuck Wagon Days, which this year raised about $145,000 for the residential school.

But with little public attention he has helped the children celebrate Christmas for the past three years with dinner, a show and, of course, presents.

This Sunday afternoon will mark the third time the party has been given at Arlington Park Race Track.

William Thayer, the track's general manager, said "Ernie's just some kind of super guy. He's got a head just as big as his frame and he's big enough to really be a Santa Claus."

Poulos' efforts are not publicized. In fact his most persistent question was "Who told about this?"

THAYER SAID that's typical of Poulos, who raised four of his own children before "adopting" the kids at Maryville.

"Ernie just enjoys it. Racing's been good to him and he shares the benefits," he said.

Poulos said he started doing it when he "relaxed" and stopped going to Florida for the winter racing season.

"I relaxed and decided I could help. It's the least I could do," he said.

The "least" he's doing is putting the friendly arm on his friends for toys, bikes, coats, footballs and games.

Jack Loome, president of the track, donates the food and the help for the children's dinner in addition to providing the dining room.

BUT THERE ARE also the little touches he thinks of.

He hasn't forgotten the tradition of Christmas apples and oranges. His banker chips in a 50-cent piece for each child, as one example.

Thayer laughed and said Poulos' friends are getting conditioned to Poulos' holiday rounds and gift hustling.

Rev. Smyth said Poulos "goes a little bit overboard" on the gifts, what with the 100 pairs of roller skates, 30 bicycles and television sets for the dormitories, but "the kids just love it, and I imagine Ernie does, too."

Although other holiday parties are given for the residents, Poulos' is the largest, Rev. Smyth said. "He throws a terrific party," he said.

IF POULOS IS a suburban Santa, he talks like one that knows his way around the streets.

"He can seem like a real tough guy," Rev. Smyth said. "He comes on like he'll run right over you, but he's a very kind person. He likes doing what he does for the kids."

Poulos said, "A lot of people just don't take the time. You've got to do something in your life. If we don't help places like this, what's going to happen to them and the kids there?"

Traffic snarled by 3-car crash near downtown

Arlington Heights police charged a Deerfield man with drunken driving following a three-vehicle accident Friday night at Campbell and Chestnut streets that brought traffic near downtown to a standstill for more than an hour.

Charged was Paul Leach, 27, 1124 Greentree. Police were investigating the possibility Leach, who was not injured, was also involved in another collision at Davis and Salem streets about five minutes before the downtown mishap.

There were no serious injuries but a Mechanicsburb Pa., man, Francis Garrett, 37, was taken to Northwest Community Hospital for treatment and released.

Police said Leach was eastbound on Campbell in a pickup truck about 8 p.m. without headlights on when he collided with Garrett's auto about to make a left turn onto Chestnut. The impact pushed Garrett's auto into a third car driven by Shirley Garrison, 47, 1542 N. Kennicott, Arlington Heights, police said. She was not injured.

Police said the headlights in Leach's truck may have been knocked out in the previous collision. Those details were not available.

Roads were blocked for one block west of Chestnut while the wrecked vehicles were cleared away.

Missing out on a pension plan? Read about this big tax-saving idea!

Recently enacted U.S. Government legislation has made possible generous tax benefits for people with no pension plan.

Under the Pension Reform Act, you can contribute annually up to 15 per cent of your earnings — not to exceed $1500 — to a pension plan. You can deduct the entire amount from your taxable income for the year and pay no current income taxes on it whatsoever. In fact, you pay no taxes on it until retirement when, most likely, you will be earning less and in a far lower tax bracket. What's more, the money contributed draws interest and increases rapidly in your retirement fund. And you pay no taxes on the interest, either, until retirement.

Through MONY, I have long specialized in pension plans. If you are not participating in a pension plan, I can show you how to get one of your own quickly and easily — while you save on taxes. All it takes is a letter or phone call.

Cards are for far-away friends

by KAREN THOMPSON

I don't agree with past or present etiquette setters on a lot of things, but I must report that ideas on Christmas protocol are changing and in line with the times.

ON CHRISTMAS CARDS:

"I think the spirit of Christmas is destroyed when a man and his wife sit down and address hundreds of engraved or printed Christmas cards, partly for business reasons, partly because they know they will be deluged with hundreds of cards at which they scarcely have time to glance once the holiday season is upon them. But they will display the deluge, nevertheless, as proof of their vast and friendly acquaintances." Amy Vanderbilt's Etiquette, 1972.

"The growing custom of sending cards to everyone and anyone with whom you have a nodding acquaintance is getting out of hand," says Elizabeth Post, the granddaughter-in-law of the legendary Emily. "For many people it's becoming a contest to see how many cards they can display on their mantel. That's not the spirit of Christmas," Mrs. Post writes in the latest edition of "The New Emily Post's Etiquette," a hefty volume that carries on the tradition of Emily's original 1922 book.

Yes, when Christmas card sending becomes a chore, it's time to pare your list. My philosophy is if I can't take the time to write a note at Christmas, then there's no use to even sending a card.

Mrs. Post suggests that cards be sent to people you really wish to greet, but who are not quite close enough to you to exchange gifts.

"Cut your list to distant friends and leave out the close-by persons to whom you may wish a Merry Christmas in person," said Ms. Vanderbilt in her book.

ON BUSINESS GREETING CARDS:

"If business cards are to be sent — and I have never seen the logic in that practice — let the business send them, not the executive and his wife," said Amy.

Elizabeth Post is a bit more harsh in her ideas on business cards. "Tradespeople who send cards to customers, unless there is also a personal relationship, do it only to bolster business."

Most people, I think, have done some readjusting of their Christmas card priorities but every year it seems there are a few who consider the bigger and flashier the card the better. I prefer cards simple and personal.

ON FAMILY HISTORIES:

"People who send mimeographed histories of the past year mean well with this once-a-year communication. The truth is that outside of your very closest friends, others could care less if the baby has six teeth now or that Johnny had his tonsils out," says Ms. Post.

Instead she suggests that a handwritten note, telling the high points, would be much more appreciated.

What do you do if you get a Christmas card from someone to whom you haven't sent one too late to reciprocate?

According to Ms. Vanderbilt, "you should send a very personal card that perhaps includes a photo of your children. Enclose a short note that, delicately, indicates that your friend was not on your original list. Or, just send a brief note at another time of the year that will thank your friend for remembering."

A FEW OTHER TIPS:

- "Mr. and Mrs." is used only on formal cards and there is an increasing tendency away from this.
- The person signing the card usually places his or her name second out of courtesy.
- All personal Christmas cards should be hand-stamped, never on a postage meter.

A closing thought from Elizabeth Post: "Thousands of people don't — and never have — sent cards and are not one bit less well liked because of it."

Your greeting can help a worthy cause

An increasingly popular custom at Christmas is conveying greetings which at the same time support a worthy cause. This reflects the true spirit of the holiday.

Cards purchased from charitable organizations help underprivileged, handicapped or retarded children. They help research a dread disease or people who are sick. Here is a list of the organizations in the Northwest area that are selling these cards with a dual purpose this year.

Collecting

with Grace Carolyn

Print collectors a special breed

There is a peculiar brand of collectors who are strictly "for the birds" — or the mountain lions, the whitetail deer, the grizzly, the pomegranate and the flowering dogwood. These are collectors of artists' prints which are sold mainly through galleries or wildlife societies. The artists are usually ardent conservationists and are actively involved in groups such as the National Audubon Society or National Wildlife Federation.

These artists feel beholden to do more than "paint birds, animals and flowers," they work to preserve our national natural heritage, and their combined efforts have helped raise millions for various conservation causes.

Several years ago my mother became interested in one of these nature artists who was born in West Virginia and who now lives in the mountains of southeastern Kentucky. He is Ray Harm, and most of his work is done directly from nature in the Appalachians, observed in the field and reflected in the animals' natural habitat and surroundings, meticulous in detail and usually caught in an instant of typical activity. My mother has several of the bird prints, which are limited in edition from around 500 to 5,000.

THE PRINT SHOWN, Great Horned Owl, was made in a series of 5,000. One thousand of these were signed and bore a special seal indicating they were sold to raise funds for a camp for underprivileged boys.

The American Eagle was signed and bore a United States Military Academy shield, sold to cadets and those associated with the academy, with proceeds donated to its fine arts activities. Many of these prints originally sold for as little as $10, and some have escalated, according to catalogs I have seen, to as many as $2,500. As in all collectibles, scarcity, subject matter and some undefinable other factor that makes some things more valuable than similar others are at work to determine values.

Ray Harm is only one of many artists doing wildlife paintings and offering collectible prints. Others are Guy Goheleach, doing much African wildlife painting; Anne Ophelia Dowden, whose specialty is flowers; Don Richard Eckelberry, who lives on Long Island; Charles Harper, a stylized, not "natural" painter; and many more too numerous to list.

AS IN ALL collecting, there are terms and the jargon of the trade in buying and selling prints. An "Original" is an authentic work of art that is one only of a kind. A "Reproduction" produces a counterpart, image or copy of an original, sometimes referred to as a print or artist proof. An "Edition" means the entire number of copies printed from a single original design. A "Limited Edition" is limited to a specified number of copies. (In a sense, however, it seems to me all editions are limited, for somewhere there is an ending to a printing!)

A "Numbered Print" is the lower number of a fraction that tells you how many were printed. The upper number of the same fraction is used to designate the print: i.e., 52/450 means number 52 in a printing of 450 copies. (Usually the lower the print number, the better.)

A "Signed Print" is one the artist approves and authenticates by applying his own written signature in the lower right hand corner, thereby increasing its value.

A "REMARQUED Artist Proof" (RAP) is a small detailed pencil sketch by the artist, which adds a personal touch and is usually limited to 100 or fewer of the Edition. "Plate Size" refers to that part of the print encompassing only the inked surface, not including the margin.

Watercolors, prints and etchings should always be matted to keep the glass away from the paper surface, and great care should be given to framing.

I cannot say that any particular wildlife print is a good investment, for who ca.. tell the vagaries of the collecting market? Some have greatly escalated; others have remained static. But if you are interested in wildlife and conservation, what better way to indulge your collecting instincts, provide beauty for the home and aid the cause of our friends of the field and forest?

Getting rid of scabies

The doctor says

by Lawrence E. Lamb, M.D.

Somewhere, somehow, I caught scabies, and, after several trips to the dermatologist, it cleared up. I couldn't convince my husband he should submit to the lotion treatment, and in several weeks he became a victim.

I have some infestation again, and now we are following the doctor's directions on the lotion, changing bed linens, and changing to freshly laundered clothes. My question is, how contagious are these mites? My doctor said the mite lives only on a warm body and therefore is passed only by close contact from the infected skin, and there is no danger of transmitting it by hanging a coat on a public coat rack, etc. His nurse says that it bounces back and forth in contact with doorknobs, dishes, etc.

This problem is playing havoc with my nerves, so I'll appreciate any information you can send us on clearing my home of this pest.

There is literally a worldwide epidemic of scabies and other small animals of the louse group at the present time.

You are more likely to get scabies from close personal contact. The female has small, sharp, cutting edges on her front legs, and with these and her jaws, she digs a tunnel into the skin. These burrows, commonly in the folds of the skin as between the fingers, are one of the best evidences of an infestation with scabies. She mates and lays her eggs here, and they hatch, producing a new crop of bugs.

The itch usually doesn't occur until nearly a month after the first burrow is plowed in your skin. So, a person may go along blissfully ignorant of a recent infection for a month or more after it started.

The itch is usually at night and most of the skin surfaces can be involved except the face and scalp (in newborn babies the scalp may be involved, too).

The parasites are killed by prescribed medical lotions or cream used after a good bath for best effect. A second application must be used a week later to kill the second crop of parasites from existing eggs hatching in the old burrows. The itch may persist for weeks after successful eradication of the parasites.

While it is true that you can get the bug most easily by personal contact, as in just sleeping in the same bed with an infected person, you can get it from infected linen and towels. After treatment you need to put on clean sheets and clean clothing. All clothing and sheets and towels that have been used must be cleaned or laundered. And, as you have found out, all members of the household must be treated at the same time.

That usually is sufficient to eliminate the infestation from any household. If you are really worried, you might want to spray the mattresses, sofas, and other inanimate objects with Kwell spray which you can get without a prescription. This is not to be used on your body. Getting the infestation from door knobs and public coat racks is not very likely. But you can get it from shaking hands or rubbing elbows with someone who has an active skin infestation.

Illinois State graduates wed Nov. 8

Mr. and Mrs. Gregg Durham

Illinois State University graduates Laurie Jean Alm, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Adolph W. Alm, Arlington Heights, and Gregg H. Durham of Pontiac, Ill., were married Nov. 8 in Southminster United Presbyterian Church, Arlington Heights.

For the double ring ceremony Laurie chose a white jersey gown with pearl and crystal trim. Her three-tiered, fingertip veil was held by a matching headpiece and she carried an orchid, stephanotis and ivy cascade.

Jean Cummings, Des Plaines, was maid of honor in a turquoise jersey gown. Identically attired were bridesmaids Renee Alm, the bride's sister-in-law of Chicago, Barb Pierson, the groom's sister of Evanston, and Sharon Meier, Mount Prospect. All four carried cascades of yellow mums and greens.

ABIGAIL PIERSON, 3, the groom's niece, preceded Laurie down the aisle in a turquoise dress with a white eyelet pinafore made by the bride. The flower girl's nosegay was of yellow and white roses and greens.

Gregg, son of Mr. and Mrs. George E. Durham of Pontiac, was attended by his brother John of Denver, Colo. Ushers for the 4 p.m. wedding were Walter Alm, the bride's brother of Chicago, Art Pierson, the groom's brother-in-law of Evanston, and John Kelson, Denver.

Following a reception for 175 guests at Biancalana's in Elmwood Park, the newlyweds left on a honeymoon at Niagara Falls and Canada. They will make their home in Bloomington where the groom is employed by the university.

Laurie is a 1971 graduate of Forest View High School and earned a degree in home economics from Illinois State this year. Gregg has bachelor's and master's degrees from Illinois State.

Arlington bridal couple add nostalgic touches

Touches of other weddings in other years added nostalgia to the ceremony Nov. 8 when Susan Liljegren and William Grandt, both of Arlington Heights, were married in St. James Catholic Church.

For her "something borrowed" Sue, daughter of the Richard Liljegrens, carried the hanky carried by her mother at her wedding, and for her "something old" she wore her grandmother's wedding ring.

The ring pillow carried by Bill's 3-year-old cousin and godchild, Daniel Rolfs of Delavan, Wis., had been used for three generations in the groom's family. It was first carried by Daniel's father at the wedding of Bill's parents, the Wilbert Grandts, and later carried by Bill at the wedding of Daniel's parents.

TWO HUNDRED guests attended the 5:30 p.m. candlelight, double ring service and the reception at Nordic Hills Country Club.

Sue chose Deborah Heicken of DeKalb as her maid of honor, and her bridesmaids were Pauline Brookhaus, Iowa City, Jennifer Dixon and the groom's cousin, Kathryn Conner, Arlington Heights, and Sue Colianni, Eau Claire, Wis. Debbie, Pauline and Jennifer are former Arlington High schoolmates of the bride.

Junior bridesmaid was Sue's sister, Ann, and flower girl was 3-year-old Beth Lind, cousin of the bride from Fort Dodge, Iowa.

All wore rust colored Qiana gowns with white satin collars and cuffs, and carried dried bouquets of baby's breath, straw flowers and wheat with yellow roses.

AN IVORY organza gown with Brussels and Alencon lace and pearls was Sue's choice for her wedding. Her veil fell from a lace headpiece and she carried yellow roses, white mums and baby's breath.

Mr. and Mrs. William Grandt

Best man was Albert Colianni of Eau Claire, formerly of Arlington Heights. Ushers were the groom's brothers, Charles of Des Plaines and James of Arlington Heights, his cousin, Robert Conner, Arlington Heights, and the bride's brother, Mark, Glendale Heights.

After Arlington High, Sue and Bill studied at Harper College. Sue also attended Northern Illinois University and is now employed by Illinois Bell, Arlington Heights. Bill studied at Northeastern Illinois University and is with United Parcel Service, Palatine.

The pair honeymooned in the New England states and are now at home in Arlington Heights.

Cream with long shelf life on market

The home line

by Dorothy Ritz

Cream with a long shelf life has come on the market in several places and it's obvious that before long it will be available everywhere. Consumers can speed the process simply by urging their store managers to stock the new cream, which will carry the label of "ultra-pasteurized." Standard pasteurizing calls for holding cream at 170 degrees for 18 seconds. This destroys disease-bearing elements, but does not kill bacteria that bring spoilage. Ultra-pasteurizing is done at 280 degrees for one second. As I get it, all bacteria are eliminated.

My test purchases have resulted in shelf life of more than 30 days. One industry report has made an 11-month shelf life. There may be some taste difference if used in desserts or whipped toppings, but I detect none at all in other uses, such as coffee, tea, cereals, eggs and so forth. Clearly, it's going to save all of us waste we've always put up with.

Dear Dorothy: Your article about outsmarting pickpockets interested me. I'd like to suggest that women never keep important papers in their wallets. After having to replace my driver's license, Social Security card, college ID and car license receipt, I no longer do.—Karen B. Whisman

I'm following such a program, too. The experience certainly shakes one up. Now my wallet contains only one identification card.

Dear Dorothy: A reader said she thought all good cooks used wooden spoons. Maybe so, but why do some people touch their mouth to the spoons — as shown on TV so often? I was a restaurant cook and, to taste anything, I'd ladle a small amount into a teaspoon with the wooden spoon. Anyone touching the mixing spoon to the mouth would get exiled from any kitchen of mine.—Bob Swire

Dear Dorothy: I have a large automatic electric fryer in which foods stick. Is there anything I can do to stop this sticking?—Mrs. Lena Norton

It probably needs "the treatment." Wash it with soap or detergent, rinse and dry. Then rub it with unseasoned fat and place it on the lowest heat setting for about an hour. After this, use soap rather than detergent when cleaning the fryer.

TIP TO NEW HOMEMAKERS: If you are planning hamburgers for dinner, don't go into a swivet if unexpected company shows up around eating time. Just move in to make the hamburger patties thinner than you planned. Saute a few sliced mushrooms and chopped onions and put them between two of the thin seasoned patties and broil. To add a gourmet touch, a sprinkling of Roquefort or blue cheese will score big.

(Mrs. Ritz welcomes questions and hints. If a personal reply is required, please enclose a stamped, self-addressed envelope. Write to her in care of Suburban Living, Paddock Publications, Box 280, Arlington Heights, Ill. 60006.)

Rena Trevor, coordinator of the Women's Program; Audrey Inbody, associate counselor for Continuing Education; and Suzanne Herron, catering manager, all of Harper College, join Ann Howell, former editor of Money Management Institute of Household Finance, Chicago, in presenting the program.

Those registering should send name, address, telephone and social security numbers (including course name and date) with a check for tuition to the Admissions Office, Harper College, Palatine, Ill., 60067. Reservations can be made by telephoning 397-3000 ext. 410. Child care will be available by prior registration.

KIDS' KORNER

by MARILYN HALLMAN

LUCKY BIRD ORNAMENT

According to an old Swedish custom, a bird in a nest brings good luck during the coming year. Here's how to make a lucky bird ornament for the holidays in your home. You'll need excelsior, white glue, a jar lid, foil, a large bowl, gold spray, a small bird, and a snap clothespin.

Line a jar lid with a double thickness of foil. Mix one part of white glue with two parts of water in a bowl. Stir in excelsior, cut into pieces about 1" or 2" long. Mix well.

Mold a nest with the wet excelsior in the foil-lined lid. Bake in a 250-degree oven for two hours. Remove the nest from the lid and peel off the foil. Turn the nest upside down on thick newspaper to finish drying overnight: Glue it to a snap clothespin.

Spread out newspaper and spray the nest and clothespin gold. Glue in the bird. (You may want to make a clay bird.) Now snap it to a branch of your Christmas tree for a lucky New Year.

Ask Andy

Winds must obey nature's rules

Andy sends a complete 20-volume set of the Merit Students Encyclopedia to Sandra Henswold, 12, of Clinton, B.C., Canada, for her question:

WHAT PUSHES THE WINDS?

The winds blow in all directions. There are gentle breezes and howling gales. There are local winds and planetary winds that sweep around the globe. Yet all of them are obeying certain rules. However, controling the wild winds calls for some mighty teamwork. This includes the sun and the spinning earth and the natural behavior of the gaseous atmospphere.

The wind is merely a current of moving air, obeying certain laws that compel it to blow from here to there. The atmosphere that surrounds our globe is a mixture of gases, obeying the laws that tell all gases how to behave. In liquids and solids, the mini molecules and atoms are crowded close together. In gases, the individual atoms and molecules are separated from each other by spaces.

This gives them more freedom to move around — and also imposes rules that insist that gases must mix and mingle to share the available space. This is what happens in the restless atmosphere. However, on a global scale, things keep happening to unmix the mixture.

For example, it is possible to squeeze the spaces between air molecules and crowd them closer together. This compressed air of crowded molecules is denser and heavier. We can compress air with a bicycle pump by squeezing it in a solid container. On a global scale this happens when a vast mass of air becomes chilly.

This mass of dense, heavy air must obey the mixing and mingling laws of gases. It must spread out, blowing into regions of lighter air, much as water flows downhill. This is what starts the winds and keeps them blowing until the heavy high-pressure air is properly mingled with the lighter low-pressure air in the region.

Meantime the beaming sun warms patches of land and sea — which warm masses of air above them. The polar air chills to form regions of heavy high pressure, while in the troics bubbles of warm light air expand and rise aloft. This global situation sets up winds blowing from the poles toward the equator. However, the spinning earth veers them left or right and keeps the prevailing winds blowing around the globe.

Belts of prevailing winds continuously circle the globe — driven by polar air blowing to the tropics and twisted by the spinning earth. Meantime, local patches of warm and cool air set up local breezes and windy storms. In these, too, desne heavy air blows in to mingle with masses of lighter air. And before these airy ingredients are properly mingled, the earth and the sun are busy building up more masses of light and heavy air in various places around the globe.

Andy sends a 7-volume set of the Chronicles of Narnia to Dee Dee Healey, age 12, of Mundelein, Ill., for her question:

WHY DO THE PLANETS KEEP IN THEIR ORBITS?

Each of the nine planets stays in its own orbit, and experts agree that it cannot do otherwise. For example, earth has the third orbit from the sun and Mars has the fourth,and there they must stay. A planet cannot leave its orbital lane and come bashing into its neighbors. It seems that the planets have had these same orbits almost from the very beginning, when they were formed with the solar system.

The sun's mighty gravity tries to pull the planets down into its fiery furnace. But this cannot happen as long as the planets keep orbiting around. Some planets are more massive, and no two are exactly alike. Each orbits at its own speed at its own distance from the sun. Its orbital path depends on its mass, which must cope with the sun's gravity. It does this by orbiting at a certain speed at a certain distance. If it changed speed, distance or direction it could fall into the sun.

Britain's sea heritage topic of TV special

by JOAN HANAUER

NEW YORK (UPI) — National Geographic used to mean a magazine you picked up in the dentist's waiting room to read about distant places and peek discreetly at photographs of topless native women.

Now the National Geographic Society also produces sophisticated television specials.

For its next production the society has returned to travel with "This Britain: Heritage of the Sea," an hour-long documentary scheduled to air on PBS Tuesday at 6:30 p.m., hosted by E. G. Marshall and narrated by Richard Basehart.

National Geographic's Britain differs from the mother-of-Parliaments, William Shakespeare slept here and darts in the pub offered by the typical travelogue.

THE PROGRAM concentrates instead on Britain's dependence on the sea and its devotion to pomp and tradition. Along the way, there's a strong tinge of the special eccentricity that distinguishes the breed.

The herring fishermen of the Outer Hebrides shown in the first segment have little time for eccentricity, however, steaming out of ports off the Northwest coast of Scotland in dark and cold and storm, with danger very real and profits from a good catch dependant on sonar and intuition.

Okay, how many more candidates do you need?

The way we see it

Slatemaking: same old story

This week's political slatemaking, conducted by the Daley Democrats and Cook County Republicans, mirrors the problems of political parties in the county.

Consider, first, the Democrats. After weeks of a well-publicized and crowded scramble for a handful of state positions, Daley's inner circle went behind closed doors and came up with a slate top-heavy with familiar names.

To challenge independent Democratic Gov. Daniel Walker, they picked Sec. of State Michael Howlett. His selection heralds a tough and possibly colorful primary battle next spring.

Also on the organization ticket are four men they hope will maintain the party's grip on state offices: Alan Dixon, Neil Hartigan, Michael Bakalis and Cecil Partee. All except Partee have held state-wide office.

Just a few blocks away, the Republicans selected their Cook County slate. They had an opposite problem; few of their candidates have been heard of by the voters of the County of Cook.

Bernard Carey, the incumbent state's attorney, is the sole exception. Such persons as Roland R. Moore, Jr., Casimir G. Oksas and William Griffith of Arlington Heights are going to have to scramble mightily for name recognition next year.

These two examples of political slatemaking aptly characterize the problems inherent in this county's recent political traditions.

The Democrats trumpet their choices as those "of the Democratic Party." That simply isn't so. The candidates essentially were selected by Mayor Daley and his inner circle, and the critical decisions were made in private. But it will be up to the voters next year to determine in the primary if these are to be the Democratic candidates.

The Republicans' problem is anonymity; many political observers see 1976 as an unpromising Republican year, and as a result better-known GOP candidates are hard to find.

At this early stage in the political battles, we still manage to be optimistic about what lies ahead. There are issues apenty in Cook County and in Illinois for the election year; we hope to see a vigorous debate of them throughout the upcoming year.

WATERTOWN, Mass. Dec. 6 — Because of the smallpox scare, the House of Representatives ordered persons coming from Boston to be confined to houses used as hospitals until they were certified as cured or free of infection. All letters and messages from the city were being dipped in vinegar as another precaution against the disease.

Help out travelers

It's down to the wire again for people who are still trying to find an airplane seat during the holidays.

Last-minute competition for space is tough this time of year, and airline officials report some flights already are booked solid. But by the time those planes take off, there could be several empty seats. That is because of a tremendous lack of consideration exhibited annually by a number of travelers who make several reservations on different airlines and never bother to cancel those they don't want.

We hope people who made these extra reservations will take the time in the next few days to cancel them and open the seats for those who need them. Many people only get to fly home and see their families during the holidays and it is unfair to them to go through hours of hassling with airline officials to get a seat, or to face the uncertainties of standby status.

With a little cooperation and concern for others, everyone should be able to make it home for the holidays.

The almanac

(by United Press International)

Today is Saturday, Dec. 6, the 340th day of 1975 with 25 to follow.

The moon is between its new phase and first quarter.

The morning stars are Venus, Mars and Saturn.

The evening stars are Mercury and Jupiter.

Those born on this date are under the sign of Sagitarrius.

American poet Joyce Kilmer was born Dec. 6, 1886.

On this day in history:

• In 1917, a total of 1,630 persons died when a Belgian relief ship and a French munitions vessel collided and exploded in the harbor at Halifax, Nova Scotia.

• In 1933, Americans crowded into liquor stores, bars and cafes to buy their first legal alcoholic beverages in 13 years.

• In 1941, President Franklin D. Roosevelt sent Japanese Premier Hirohito a hope that gathering war clouds would be dispelled. Japan attacked Pearl Harbor the following day.

• In 1943, Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower became commander-in-chief of "Operation Overlord" — code name for the forthcoming invasion of the European continent, almost totally occupied at that time by the armies of Nazi Germany.

A thought for the day: President Franklin Delano Roosevelt said, "We, too, born to freedom and believing in freedom, are willing to maintain freedom."

'Reagan dedicated to principles'

I would like to take exception with the recent letter by Mr. Gates regarding the presidential campaign of former California Gov. Ronald Reagan. In order to provide a balance of views on this matter, the following points need to be made.

The basic theme of Mr. Gates' letter was that he felt that Ronald Reagan would end up like other "conservatives" such as Eisenhower, Nixon and Ford and not change things after he is elected. In the first place, I question whether some of these other men were truly conservatives in light of the policies they advocated before their presidential campaigns.

Beyond that, however, are several things which must be raised in response to Mr. Gates' conclusions and which also point to the need for the Reagan candidacy. First, the existence of an opposition Congress and how these men related to it must be considered. Secondly, there are important differences between these individuals.

WITH THE LONE exception being the period from 1952-54 during the Eisenhower years, the Congress has been controlled by Democrats and Republicans who have supported the concept of big government for decades. The voting public often goes without remembering that Congress has control of the purse strings and sets federal policy. Admittedly, a president must take the lead and make recommendations to Congress, which still must make the final decision. Unfortunately, the current Congress is still bent towards more government, not less, and more spending, not less. Of course, past presidents and the current occupant of the White House have failed to match their pre-election rhetoric with their post-election conduct. This is one reason why Reagan must be elected as the GOP nominee — President Ford has been unable to lead the nation.

Secondly, however, there are reasons why the previous presidents have failed but there are also reasons which separate Ronald Reagan from the others and give him a fighting chance of changing what is happening today.

Ronald Reagan's entire political life has been built around articulating the principles of individual freedom, limited government and free enterprise. Our past presidents have been anti-big government only when it suited their own best interests and then they gave it only lip service. It is unfair to lump Ronald Reagan with President Ford and the others in this regard in terms of belief. Even his critics have spoken about Reagan's dedication to principle.

Another key difference and Reagan asset is the fact that he served two terms as governor of the nation's most populous state. The best performance rating is that the voters of California re-elected him by a wide million-vote margin. Ronald Reagan had had eight years of experience in implementing many of the things that he talks about in his presidential campaign today. Admittedly, he didn't achieve everything that he wanted to and he would be the first to say that. But no other candidate for the White House can claim to have the background that Reagan has in reversing the trends of growing government. As governor of California, he had to overcome an opposition state legislature to accomplish many of the things that he did. He took his case directly to the people on the grass roots level. Finally, he has the added perspective of being outside of the special interest forces which shape Washington, D. C. A national Reagan administration would be the most effective in history in terms of bringing government and taxes under control.

MOST IMPORTANTLY, any of our past presidents including Ford have run as individuals by asking the voters to pick them for that reason alone. In announcing his candidacy, Reagan spoke of a "counter-revolution" and a long term "crusade against the evils of big government." When is the last time that a candidate spoke of a larger movement being more important than himself? Reagan said that he recognizes that we must have a series of presidents and congresses to reverse what has developed over decades since FDR. A Reagan presidency is a start in that series.

In conclusion, Ronald Reagan offers an honest alternative to the drift which plagues the nation and the Republican party today. For those who see Big Brother taking more from them while wasting it on congressional pay raises and programs which overlap, create more problems and stay in operation — Ronald Reagan is the man to lead a taxpayer's revolt on Washington. The primary objective must be to launch an attack so fierce that what is happening at both ends of Pennsylvania Avenue today will not be repeated for a long, long time.

He encourages candidates

Dear Ms. Katherine Boyce:

I just want to thank you for your recent article dealing with my efforts to change the age requirement for eligibility for candidacy for the school board in Illinois.

I very much appreciate your continued interest in an area of reform I believe is a crucial prerequisite to initiating changes in the secondary school system as perceived from a youthful perspective.

I am waiting with great interest to see if the change in the law will encourage those who have been previously prohibited from running for election to do so.

Howlett rejects debate

by STEVE BROWN
A News Analysis

Sec. of State Michael Howlett has moved quickly to show the people of the state that he does not intend to debate the issues in his primary gubernatorial race with Gov. Daniel Walker.

Less than 48 hours after being slated, Howlett released a statement indicating he will not debate Walker before the primary.

"Let him draw his own crowd," Howlett exclaimed. This move plus a heated exchange on television between the affable Howlett and Channel 2's Walter Jacobson seems to suggest that Howlett merely wants to get the regular Democratic vote and nothing more.

HOWLETT, who has served a term as secretary of state and three terms before that as state auditor, has never found himself in a campaign where he might have to debate issues. Howlett's style is to shake hands and tell jokes.

Walker, on the other hand, has been honing his confrontation style politics for three years, jumping at every chance to engage some Democrat loyal to Mayor Richard J. Daley in debate.

He already has labelled the Democratic slate as a group of puppets and pawns of the mayor. He hopes to draw back some of the independent vote lost in recent years.

Walker might also rejuvenate a 1972 technique by debating an empty chair. He used this against U.S. Rep. Paul Simon, D-24th, with some degree of effectiveness.

Howlett and his associates say the method might not be as successful in the current campaign because Illinois voters know "Walker better today than they did when he ran against Simon."

Howlett also will make it difficult for reporters to get comments from him about Walker charges that are sure to appear in the next three months.

FOR EXAMPLE, last week Howlett gave a reporter an obscene brush-off in response to a question about who he was supporting in the the fight between Lt. Gov. Neil Hartigan and State Treasurer Alan Dixon for the slating of secretary of state.

Howlett also recently looked bad in a discussion with Maine South High School students when they tried to pin him down on a position about abortion and gun control.

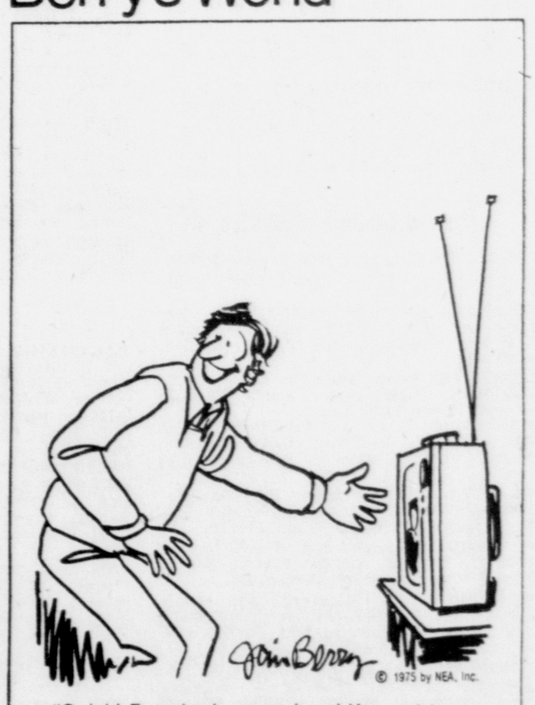

Howlett opposes liberalized abortion laws, and that's what he told the students. After several questions he also told the students they would feel the same way he did when they grew up.

He also told them they could press for all the gun control legislation they want, but he still would oppose it.

IN HIS APPEARANCE with Jacobson, Howlett declared that he did not plan to discuss his stand on various issues because he was not running his campaign for CBS or any other television network.

The series of remarks in a fairly brief timespan seem to suggest that candidate Howlett has something to learn about running anything more than an Ice Age campaign.

West pulls cage upset; stuns South

by BOB GALLAS

It was a long time coming, but the Warrior finally brought down the Hawk.

The scene of the kill was the Maine West gym Friday night where the Maine West Warriors finally tasted victory against the Maine South Hawks in a 56-50 triumph.

Not since the 1966-67 season have the Warriors beaten the Hawks, and revenge was sweet.

"We slowed things down and were together," said Warrior Bob Zuccarini, whose team lost a hard-fought tourney contest to South just last week. Zuccarini, a junior, netted 15 points and tied for rebounding honors with eight boards.

But it was a balanced effort that won the conference opener for West. Buddy Doroskin, a 6-foot-6 senior, tossed in 13 points and also pulled down eight rebounds. And Bill Fininis led all West scorers with 16.

"We had more patience tonight on offense than last week," said West coach Gaston Freeman who was in a mellow mood after the victory. "The last time we beat South was when Dave Butz (Maine South's star from 1966-69) was a sophomore," said Freeman. "Let's see, that was about the year 1900, I think," he quipped.

The Warriors used an effective zone defense which held the Hawks to one shot a possession and slowed down the South fast-break attack. The Hawks' ever-changing defenses didn't faze West as the Warriors stayed close throughout the game and used a couple of scoring outbursts to put it away.

Down 15-14 at the end of one period, West cooled the hot hand of South's big center, Russ Schmelzer, who'd burned the Warriors with nine first quarter points. Behind Schmelzer's five points and Mike Burton's six, the Hawks burst out to a 26-21 lead when West called time out with 4:46 left in the half.

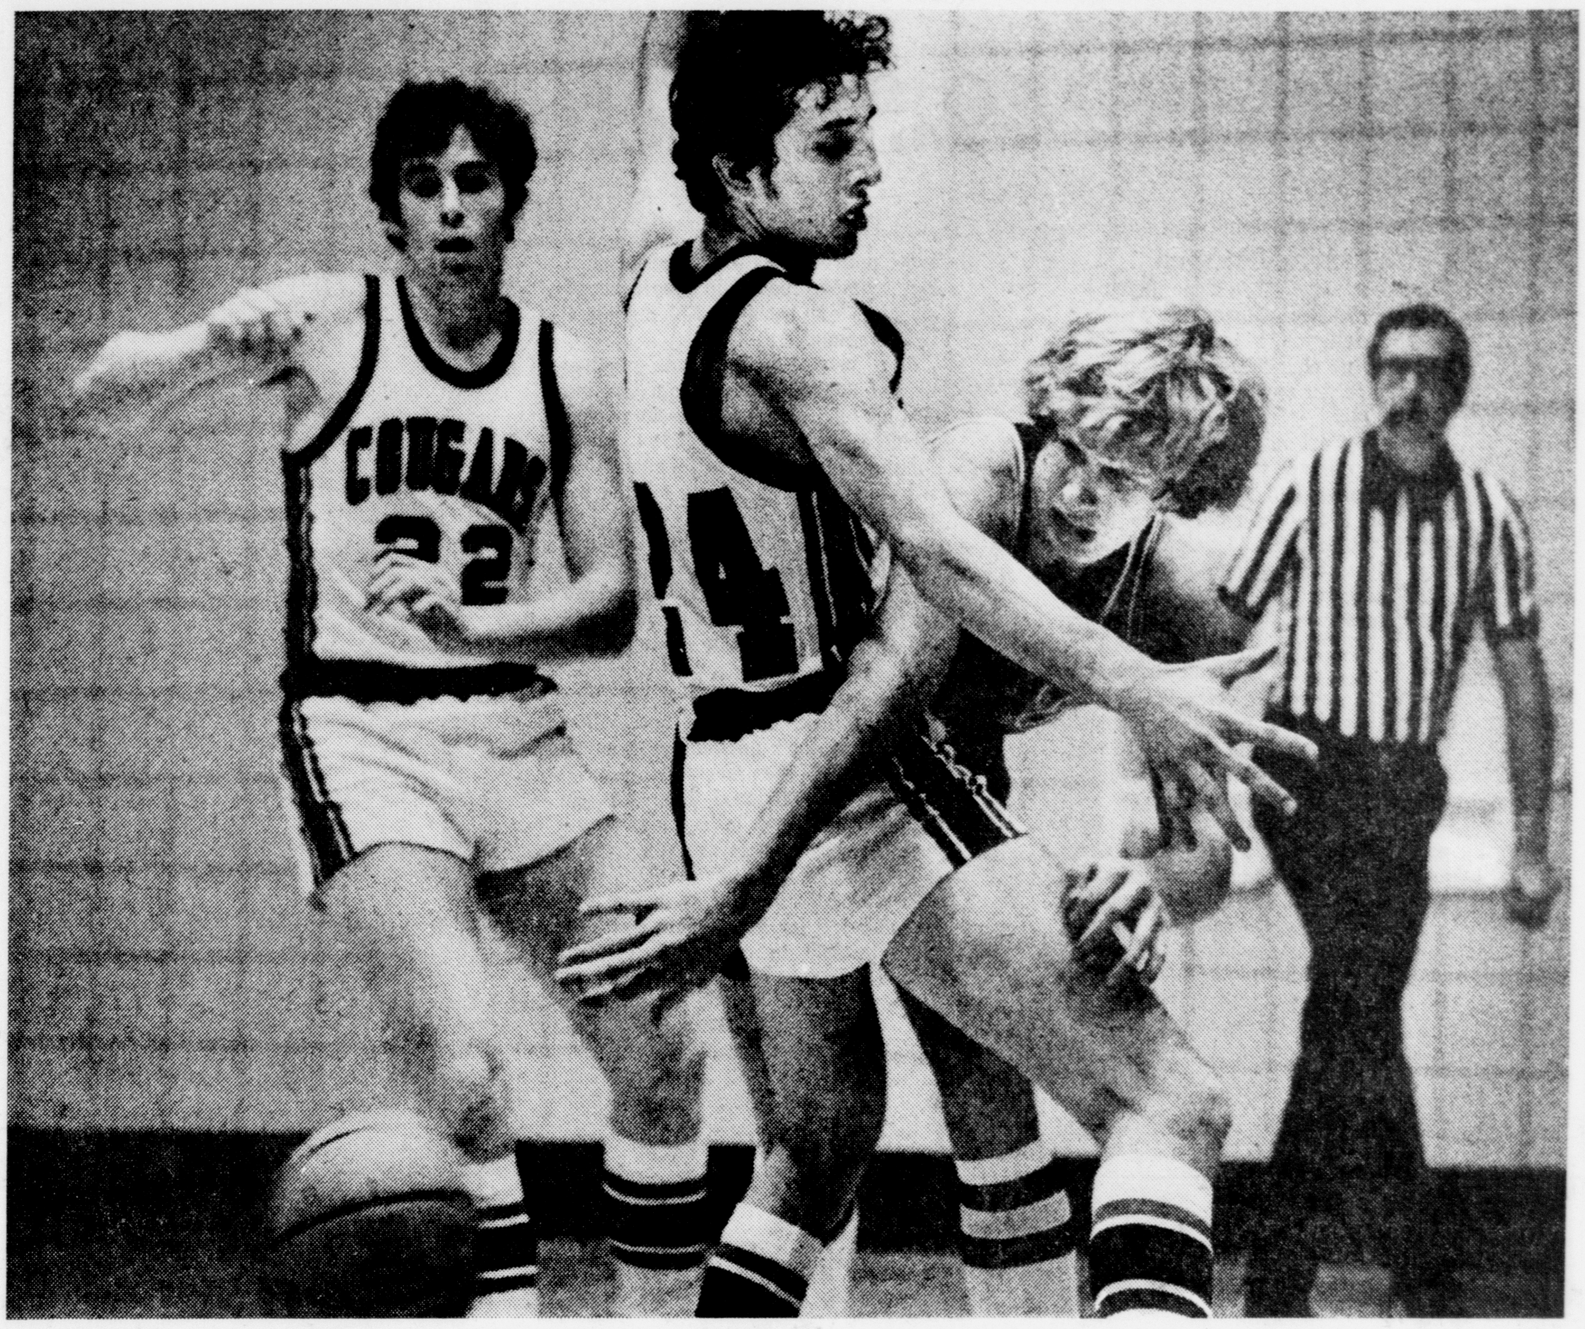

But the Warriors stormed back a la the hot hand of Zuccarini. After the time out, South left its zone defense for a man-to-man matchup, giving Zuccarini some running room.

Zuccarini took advantage, driving for two buckets and popping in two free throws to pull the Warriors to within a point with two minutes left in the half. The Hawks were shut out the last four minutes of the half as West put in two more buckets to make it 29-26 at the intermission.

The Hawks again came out firing after halftime, overtaking the Warriors with a 35-33 lead with 3:45 left in the third period. But again, West came back, controlling the backboards and shutting down the Hawk fast break. Maine South didn't score again in the period, and West pulled out for a 42-35 lead at the end of three quarters.

Fininis' hot shooting put the game on ice for Maine West in the final stanza. Fininis, a 6-foot-1 senior guard, hit all four of West's fourth quarter buckets, three of which were on the fast break. West was 6 of 12 from the free throw line in the last period, but failed to convert six, one-and-one foul shots.

The Warriors pulled their record up to two wins and three losses and take on Libertyville away tonight. South's record now stands at 2-3.

Scaffidi steals help sink Elk Grove

Defense keys Conant's 37-36 win

by CHARLIE DICKINSON

Conant and Elk Grove showed a sparse but vocal crowd at the Cougar gym Friday night just how necktie tight the Mid-Suburban League's South Division is going to be this year as Dick Redlinger's team fought the Grenadiers down to the 1,920th second before Pete Scaffidi stole a 37-36 win in the conference opener for both teams.

They did it with a defense and ball control that took the flow out of the Grenadier offense that had buried three opponents by 81 points in their Thanksgiving tournament last week.

"I definitely think our defense won the game for us," said an elated Dick Redlinger, who saw his team scrape their first victroy of the season together after two straight defeats.

"Except for (Joe) Parmentier's jumper in the fourth quarter I don't think they had an unmolested shot all night. They were shooting with our hands in their faces the whole game."

Elk Grove knew they were in for a night of it when the Cougars jumped to a 10-7 first quarter lead in the rocking Conant gym.

Only Dave Hornacek, who fired in a season high 19 points to lead all scorers, could find the hoop as he drilled 11 of his points in the first half.

Conant threw what Redlinger described as "a little halfcourt press" at the Grens and it resulted in 16 steals, normally the forte of the quick-handed Elk Grove defenders.

"I think that press won the game for us," Redlinger said. "Our offense wasn't very smooth. We don't score a whole lot of points but as long as we score more than the other guys I'll be happy."

Elk Grove's Bill Parmentier saw a different reason for his team's first loss after three straight wins.

"They controlled the ball and took away the things we like to do," Parmentier said. "I'm not taking anything away from their defense but I think their ball control is what beat us."

Elk Grove took the lead for the last time in the dead-heat game at the outset of the fourth quarter when Hornacek missed a shot, got his own rebound, then popped it back in for a 28-27 Gren lead.

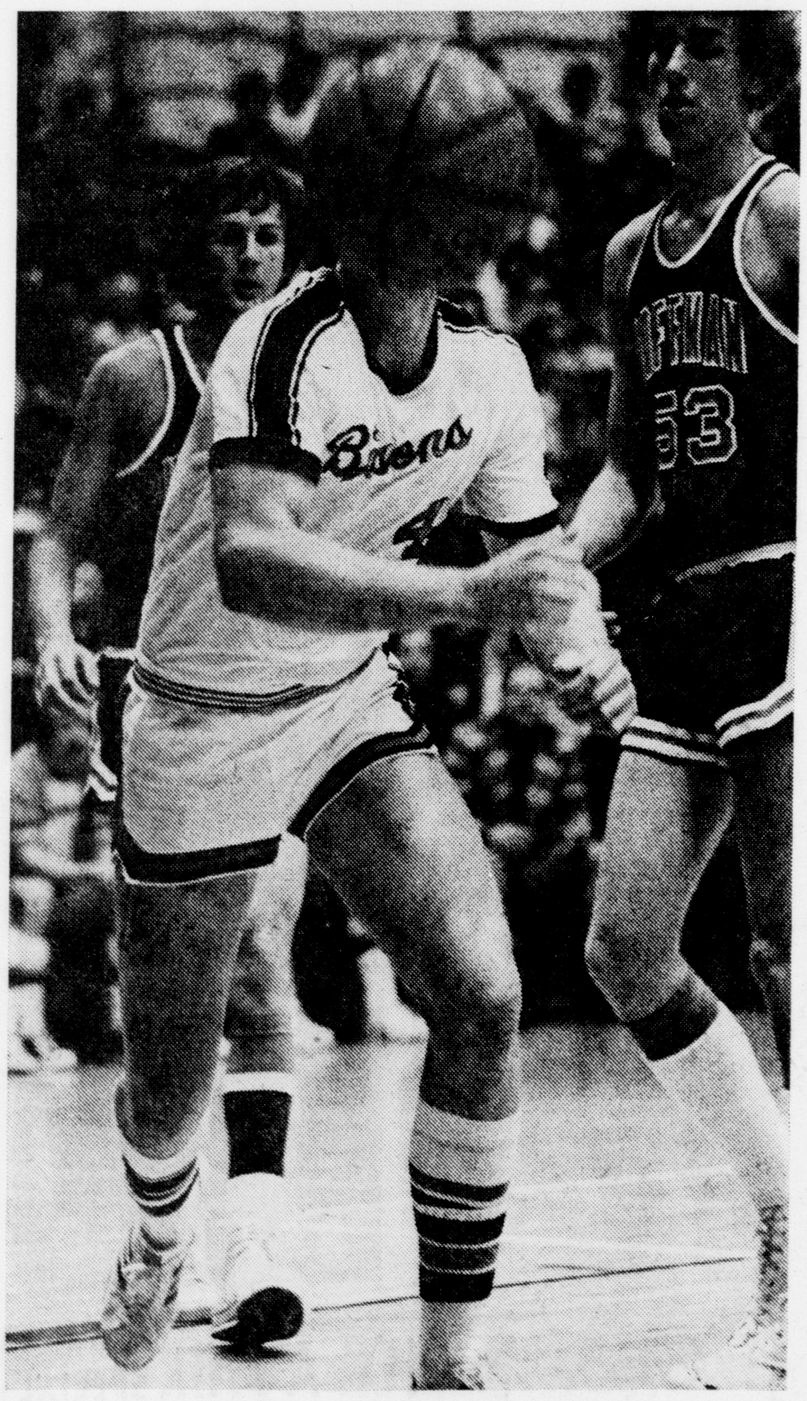

Ron Sulaski, who tossed in seven points, got three of them on a basket and a free throw but Parmentier then hit an 18-footer to knot it for the sixth time at 30-30.

But two baskets by Brian O'Donnell, who lead Conant with nine points, and a sweet drive by Mike Frisch put Conant in command 36-30.

Elk Grove scratched back to tie the game at 36-36 with Hornacek chipping in four and Mark Sass two as they took advantage of Conant's poor free throw shooting.

Scaffidi then came up with three straight clutch thefts. The first came after Hornacek had a shot blocked by Sulaski following the O'Donnell free throw that proved to be the winning point.

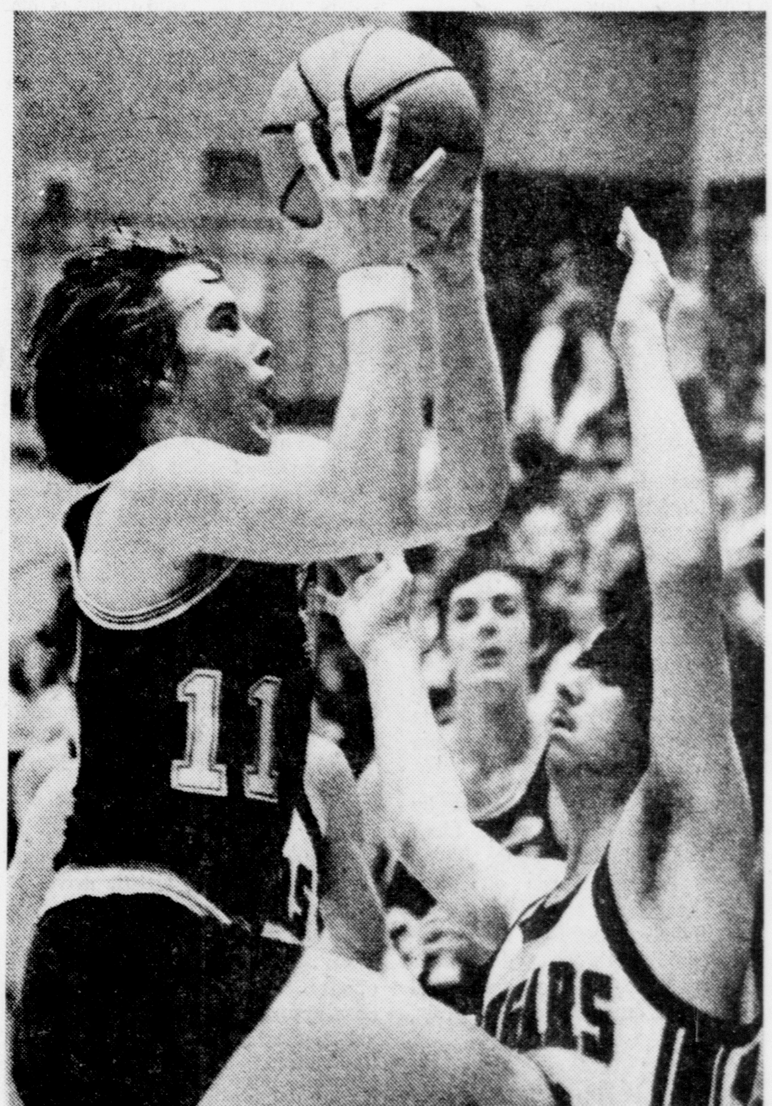

The second came with five seconds left, drawing a desperation foul from Elk Grove. Scaffidi missed both free throws and after a time out with one second left the Conant senior picked off Elk Grove's full court heave t off Elk Grove's full court heave to seal the win which may set the tempo for the wide open South Division race.

Saxons roll over Falcons, 64-46

by MIKE GARBUS

Schaumburg's 64-46 victory over the visiting Forest View Falcons last night was a long time in coming.

The win was the first ever for the Saxons against Forest View, and Schaumburg turned the trick with the help of a cold third quarter shooting performance by the Falcons which saw them post but five points.

Saxon coach Joe Breault called the drought the turning point of the game.

The score stood at 33-24 when both squads retreated to their locker rooms for intermission, but with the second-half horn, the Saxons came out with the full-court zone press they had employed at the game's outset and pulled away.

"I was pleased with our defense and with the way we handled the press," Breault said afterward.

The game was marred by several fouls (35 in all) and numerous miscues.

Schaumburg was guilty of 22 turnovers, but survived with the Falcons' 26 turnovers and their inability to connect despite having two to three shots at the basket on several occasions.

The Saxons' scoring didn't come easy though, as Forest View alternated throwing full and half court presses at the hosts. The half-court press was particularly effective.

Breault, in fact noted, "They've put the most pressure on us this year."

Dan Breen, Schaumburg's 6'5" senior forward led the way on offense with 18 points, while snaring 13 of the Saxons' 41 total rebounds on the night. Sophomore center John Chmiel chipped in 17 points and nine rebounds to aid the Saxon cause.

With the conference opener now out of the way for both units, Forest View finds itself with a 1-4 record overall. Schaumburg on the other hand, is off to a fast start with a 5-0 mark.

The Saxons host Elk Grove, 3-1, at home Tuesday night, with Forest View slated for a contest the same night at Hersey. The Huskies are scheduled to go on the road tonight against Elgin High School.

Defending league champ opens with 49-38 victory

by KEITH REINAHRD

Prospect unveiled a zone defense against Rolling Meadows Friday night, strictly on a test basis. The Knight game plan called for abandoning it quickly if any weaknesses came to light.

Evidently not many did. With less than five minutes to go in the game the Mustangs had found the range from the floor only eight times and they connected only 13 times all evening while succumbing to defending Mid-Suburban champion Prospect 48-39 in the conference lidlifter.

"It was strictly experimental," Knight coach Bill Slayton, noted of his club's tenacious defensive front. "We've been going man-to-man since the season opened and planned to revert to it again tonight if we ran into any trouble."

Prospect never did however. By playing a patient offensive game and pretty well dominating the boards (35-15), the hosts moved ahead 3-2 with 5:03 still showing in the first period and never relinquished the lead.

Meadows trailed by a point, 9-8, after one period, but Mark Longrie canned a pair of free throws and hit on a long jumper early in the second stanza to help boost the Knights into a 17-8 command.

And just before halftime another pair of Longrie pitches from the line and his feed to Brad Miller for a seven-footer resulted in a 25-14 intermission bulge. Prospect then nurtured a lead of about 10 points for the remainder of the game.

The guests netted only one field goal in the second period and just two in the third quarter. They were down 38-27 when an offensive flurry sparked by John Carbery finally brought some life to the scoreboard.

The activity also revved up Prospect's attack, however, and Miller was able to pick up some easy points underneath in the process.

Chris Etter finished with 10 points to lead Prospect in scoring. Game point honors went to Carbery though, with 12.

The victory was No. 2 in five outings overall for the Knights and their 15th straight in conference combat. Meadows owns a 1-3 mark this season.

Hawks give Bison argument

Buffalo Grove captures 65-50 win over Hoffman

by PAUL LOGAN

The Buffalo Grove Bison made their home basketball opener a success Friday night, defeating Hoffman Estates, 65-50. But their fifth victory in six tries didn't come easily.

Playing their first Mid-Suburban League crossover game of the season, the Bison of Coach Paul Grady finally broke away from the Hawks midway in the final quarter.

Since it was the first varsity conference game ever for Coach Jerry Segebrecht's Hawks and since Hoffman took a 2-3 record against the heavily favored Bison, some probably figured Buffalo Grove would win big. But three things in particular figured in the closeness of the contest.

Grady made a point of praising the hustle of the Hawks. But he also made it clear why his highly touted (a coaches' and writers' poll picked the Bison No. 1 in the North Division) team was standing around — the flu bug.

"We didn't look sharp," said Grady, adding that his team hadn't had very much practice the past week. "But from my point of view as a coach, all I'm concerned about is improvement on defense and on the boards."

Those two areas pleased Grady. He singled out junior forward Fred Heesch (6-foot-3) as being one of the key players, calling his performance "a super job. That's as well as he's played all year." Heesch scored 15 points and 11 rebounds, second only to Brian Allsmiller.

Allsmiller led both teams in both categories with 22 points and 12 rebounds. "He was tired but he wouldn't admit it," said Grady of his 6-8 junior. Allsmiller was still feeling a little sick, but Grady said his presence on the floor at only 50 per cent effectiveness meant a lot to the team. Besides his board work, he had five assists, blocked several shots and intimidated the Hawks.

Besides holding Hoffman to just about their season average, the Bison also enjoyed a sizable rebounding edge of 44-22.

Grady was especially pleased with Mike Marshall. His sophomore reserve showed he'll figure in future plans by scoring nine points in less than two quarters.

Hoffman fought hard but found the big Bison underneath too tough to handle. Forward Gene Foster managed to hit from the outside for 12 points. Guards John Staback and Joe Gajewski had 10 each.

And there was that third reason why the Bison might not have played up to their potential — tonight's home game. Coming to town is Zion-Benton, highly ranked in the Chicagoland area.

Bison followers would like to make this weekend a sweep.

Redskins sock St. Viator, 62-41

Touted Marist lives up to notices

by DOUG PALM

Quickness on offense and an aggressive ball-hawking defense proved too much for St. Viator Friday night as the Lions dropped a 62-41 decision to highly regarded Marist in the East Suburban Catholic Conference opener for both teams.

Marist's Redskins, the pre-season selection for the ESCC title, lived up to their advanced notices by coming right at the Lions from the outset and forcing numerous turnovers.

Following an opening basket by Marist, the young but game Lions forced two deadlocks before falling behind as the hosts ran off three straight baskets for a 10-4 lead.

Sophomore forward Paul Wiloff converted two free throws and added a fade-away jumper as the Lions closed out the first quarter trailing by six, 14-8.

Marist maintained its six-point margin throughout most of the second quarter as the turnovers began to even up. Glen Girard, the Lions' 6-9 center, got back into the offense in the second quarter with three baskets — two on tips. He had been held without a single shot in the first quarter.

The Lions steadied themselves and played Marist fairly even to trail by five at the half, 26-21. Marist opened up a 13-point lead late in the third quarter as 6-6 senior center Marty Howard completely dominated the lane and baseline.

On several occasions Howard dazzled the Lions with artistic drives to account for seven of the Redskins' 21 third-quarter points.

Marist displayed a very unselfish offense, featuring deft passes to the open man and a good-percentage shot selection.

Howard was a prime example. Viator coach Ron Cregier was duly impressed by Howard and his teammates.

"You have to respect Howard — a tremendously unselfish ball player who's always looking for the open man. "They are going to be 20-game winners this year, especially with that type of play and their over-all aggressiveness."

As for his own team, Cregier was encouraged by the Lions' performance, despite the final score. Turnovers — 26 of them — and missing eight of nine one-and-one situations didn't help. Cregier added, however, "We came right at them and didn't quit. That has to be encouraging."

Girard led all scorers with 19 points and 12 rebounds. Howard and 6-2 guard Jim Abolt each tallied 15 for Marist, now 5-0. St. Viator's record now stands at 1-4.

Fremd's free throws upset Larkin

by JIM COOK

Craig Rawlins cashed five of six free throws down the frantic stretch, the final two with just eight seconds remaining, as Fremd earned a spine-tingling 52-48 upset triumph over Elgin Larkin Friday night.

The Vikings of first year head coach Mo Tharp were successful on just 8-of-20 from the charity stripe upon entering the final two minutes, but instead of haunting the scrappy outfit, Fremd found the range at the free-throw line just in time.

"It would have been easier if we had gotten a couple more earlier," Tharp said with a sigh. "We practice them everyday just like everyone else, but I was beginning to wonder."

Tharp strategically substituted nine players into the Fremd lineup to help stay with Larkin's blistering fast-break speed and the fresh bodies eventually took its toll — both on the boards and on defense.

"I thought our defense kept us in the game all the way," Tharp explained. "And every kid off the bench did his share for us."

While Rawlins was working miracles at the line in the clutch, the Viking center tandem of Paul Gillette and Ray Ramsey had the handcuffs on Larkin's talented 6-9 ace Mike Henry who was limited to just eight points and only a pair in the second half.

Rawlins paced Fremd with 14 points while both Dale Hallberg and sub Dave Mize chipped in with 10 apiece. Playmaking guard Rick Kolze added seven.

"We switched to a very, very exaggerated sagging man-to-man defense in the second half," Tharp explained, "and I think it prevented us from getting burned for those easy layups Larkin was getting earlier.

"We're young and we're going to make mistakes, but a win like this has to help the kids both physically and mentally. They really carried out the game plan."

Hersey to join four squads in gym invite

Evanston High School will be host to the top four finishers in last year's state gymnastics meet in their traditional invitational tonight at 7:00.

"I think this is the strongest field in an invitational year in and year out," said Wildkit gym coach John Brinkworth. "The top four teams in the state plus us. It should be an outstanding meet."

There will be a slight dilution of talent, though, as both Hinsdale Central, the defending state champ, and Niles West, the 1975 runnerup, will be competing without their number one all-around men.

Breck Grigas, who finished fourth in the state all-around for Hinsdale last year, has his foot in a cast and will not compete.

And Bart Conner, possibly the most illustrious performer in the history of Illinois high school gymnastics, will not be eligible to compete until January.

That, however, does not mean there won't be some excellent gymnastics at Evanston Saturday night.

Taking Grigas' place for the Red Devils will be Rick Erickson. Greg Spitz will try to fill Conner's shoes for Niles West.

The Hersey Huskies, who took a third place in the state meet last year, will rely on all-arounder Dan Muenz, who hit for 7.83 in his first meet of the young season.

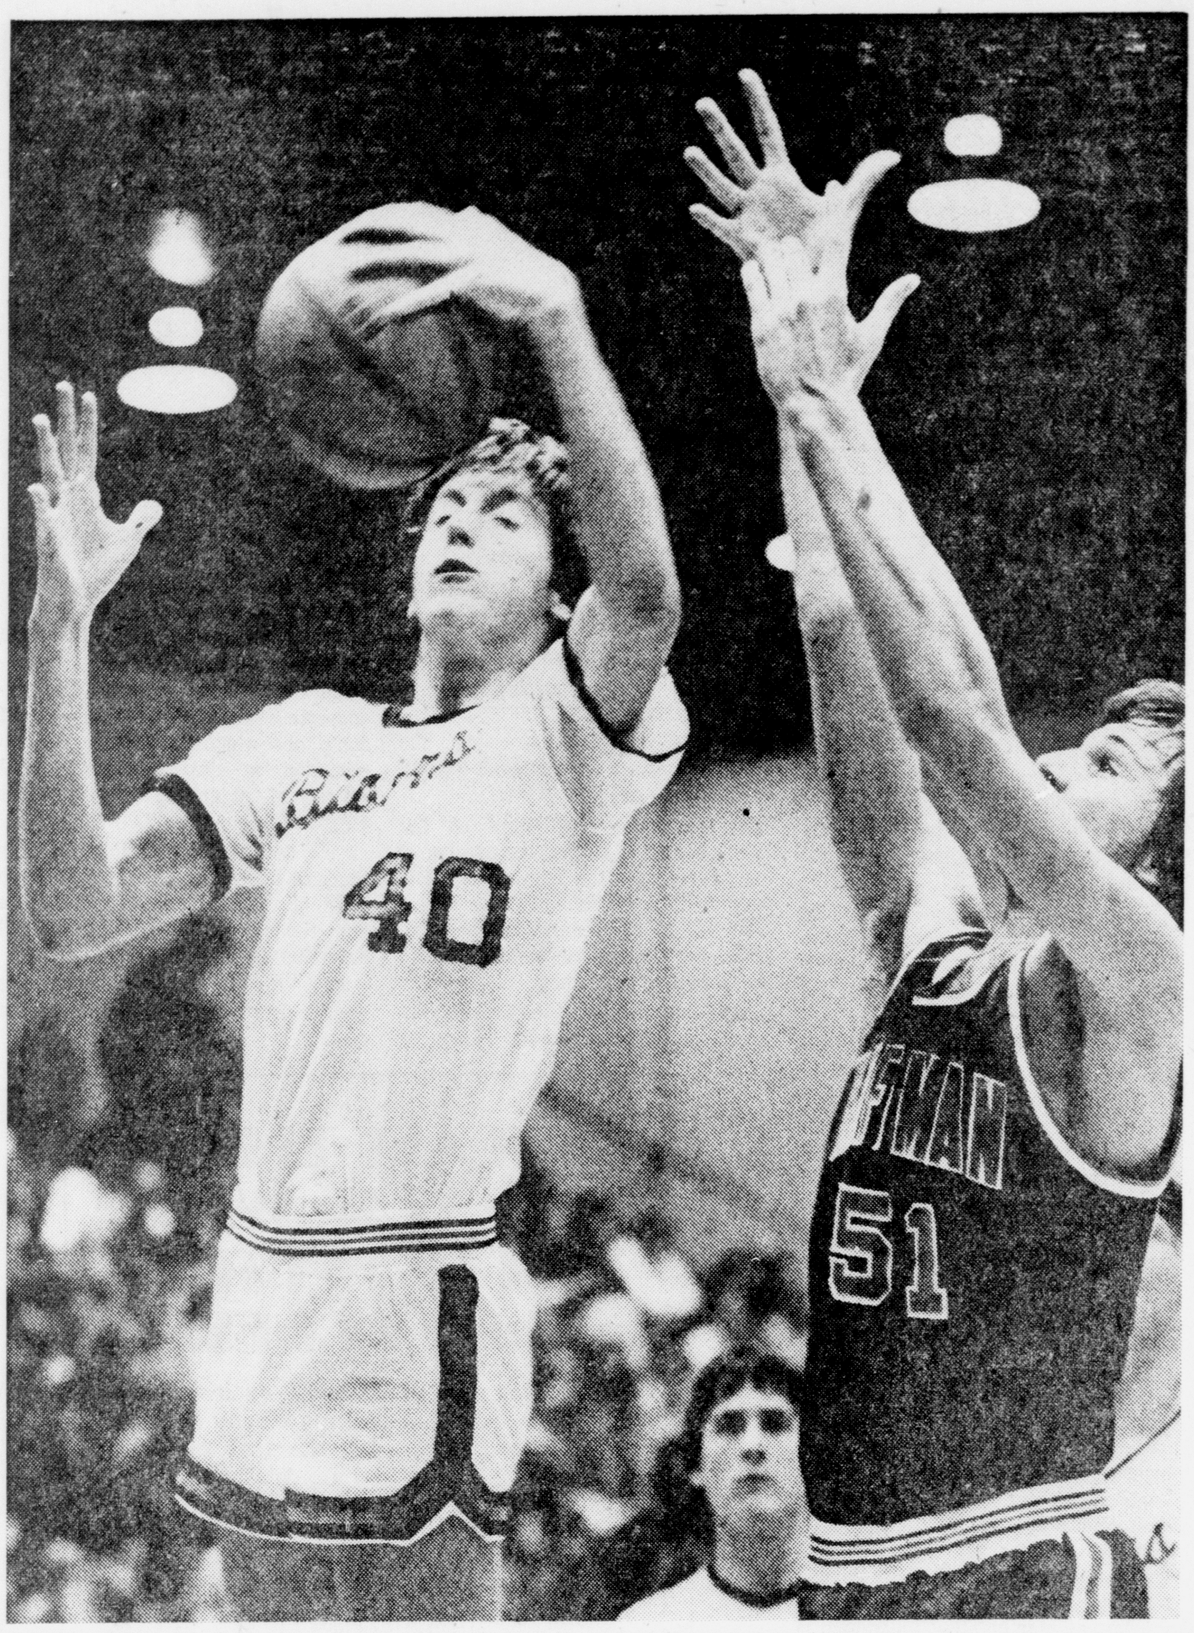

Fourth place finisher Niles East, with state all-around runnerup Neal Sher graduated, will place Greg Spillar in contention.

The format for the meet will include one all-arounder and one specialist on each event with teams allowed to enter two competitors on trampoline.

Brinkworth will go with all-around man Leon Johnson.

TAKING ONE of his game-high 12 rebounds is Buffalo Grove's Brian Allsmiller during action Friday night against visiting Hoffman Estates. Coming up short is Joe Tully. Allsmiller scored 23 points in a 65-50 victory.

Cagers keep busy tonight; Harper entertains Joliet

Several Mid-Suburban League basketball teams will get a taste of non-conference competition at its best tonight.

Hersey visits Elgin in the Huskies' severest test of the season. Arlington hosts a surprising Barrington team, Wheeling travels to Stevenson, Buffalo Grove entertains Zion-Benton, Palatine visits Warren, and Fremd plays at Lake Forest.

That's just the North division teams.

Conant hosts Lake Park and Rolling Meadows takes on visiting St. Viator. No other South division teams see action tonight.

Maine West plays at Libertyville in another game.

All games are scheduled to begin at approximately 8 p.m.

In junior college play, Harper will meet Joliet at St. Viator High School beginning at 7:30 p.m.

"I've already told the kids they'll be looking at a lot of belt buckles," said Hersey coach Roger Steingraber, who leads his Huskies up against one of the area's top teams, the Elgin Maroons.

Elgin is big, quick, and improved over last year's team that took a back seat to Elgin-Larkin in the Upstate Eight race. Hersey (3-1) has lost only to Glenbard West — in a game the Huskies probably should have won.

Wheeling (3-2) faces Stevenson on the heels of the Wildcats' two-out-of-three performance at the Woodstock holiday tourney. Wheeling's only tournament loss was a close decision to Grant.

Arlington and Barrington renew their long acquaintance tonight, and the Cardinals (1-3) are off to one of their poorer starts in memory. The Cards have faced some rough opponents in the early going, and they have just a win over Willowbrook to show for it.

Arlington's interim coach Don Drain blamed a lack of experience for the Cards' early stumblings. "We should improve our over-all confidence in each game we play," said Drain.

Zion-Benton will welcome the Buffalo Grove Bison to its floor featuring a new coach (Phil Judson) and the coach's son (Rob Judson). The Zee-Bees will have to contend with all-state prospect Brian Allsmiller, who is already carrying a 27-point average.

Palatine visits a Warren team that gave Buffalo Grove some trouble until the final quarter last week, and Pirate coach Ron Finfrock is still unsettled on a starting lineup. Kevin McKenna and Ken Reid are the mainstays of the Palatine squad as of this moment.

Fremd and new coach Mo Tharp are still experimenting with starting lineups themselves, but one thing Tharp seems set on is his new forward, Kerry Field, who earned a starting spot in the Glenbard tourney.

"There's still a lot of fight for positions on this team," Tharp noted. "I've used at least eight players in every game. I like to use eight, nine or 10 players every game."

The Harper Hawks (1-4) will be trying to get back on the winning track against Joliet.

Harper saw a close game with Illinois Valley turn into a rout Tuesday night as the Hawks sustained their fourth loss of the season, 107-79.

"I couldn't believe how fast we lost control of that game," said Harper's Roger Bechtold. "We were playing well and had taken the lead and then we made four fast turnovers and that was it."

Palatine captures pressure road win; trips up Maine North

Palatine's Pirates took their McKenna-Reid show on the road Friday night, added Rick Benson to the starring cast, and gave their fans a dramatic 60-54 non-conference victory at Maine North.

"This showed we can play gutsy ball and pull it out under pressure," said a very happy Coach Ron Finfrock afterward. "We almost gave it to them at the end, but generally I liked the way we played. We may be getting it together now."

After a mistake, foul-filled first half in which neither team gained the upper hand, the Pirates came out roaring in the third quarter. A 12-4 spurt led by Benson, Kevin McKenna, and Kevin Fenton, together with a much tighter zone defense, made the difference.

"I really liked the way Benson hit those five straight baskets, and the way Fenton played some real good defense under the basket to keep them from penetrating," said Finfrock.

The Pirates raced out to a 45-35 third quarter lead as the frustrated Norsemen were limited to long outside shots which didn't drop.

In the fourth quarter, however, North got Ron Brooks and Jim Karas loose under the basket a couple of times, substitute Rick Jacobson hit a couple of long shots as did Mike Abraham, and the Pirates lead evaporated to four points.

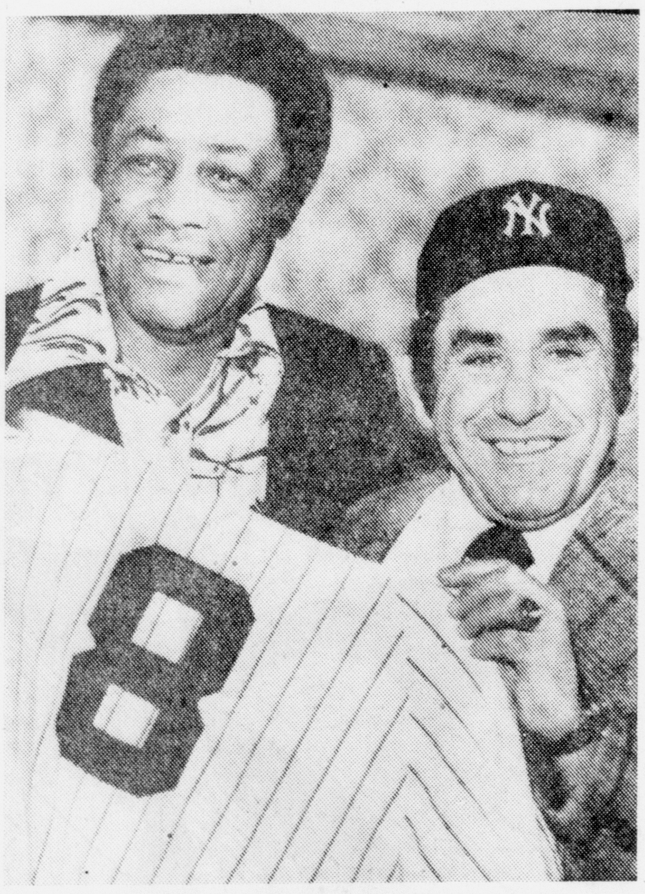

Palatine then got lucky, and gutsy. Twice in the final minute Benson stole the ball and tried 15-foot jumpers, when all Finfrock wanted his boys to do was take layups or hold the ball. One shot he hit with one minute left, and on the other he was fouled with 20 seconds left. He missed the free throws but McKenna got the rebound and rammed it home for the clinching points.

McKenna, hitting at will from his favorite point at the side, poured in 27 points, with Ken Reid adding 13 and Benson 12.

It was the Pirates' second win this season in five starts.

The Pirates got a scare late in the game when McKenna went down after a collision, holding his right knee. After some exercise and an ice bag, however, he came back in, apparently not injured.

YANKEE COME HOME. Former Mets manager and Yankee great Yogi Berra (right) displays old uniform number that he will wear as a New York coach under manager Billy Martin. Helping Yogi is another Yank coach Elston Howard.

Berra remodels retired uniform

The New York Yankees brought Number 8 out of retirement Friday and were optimistic that when Yogi Berra climbs into his old uniform as a coach next year he'll help the club reproduce the dynamics that once ruled baseball.

Berra, fired as manager from the crosstown Mets last season, joins old buddy Manager Billy Martin as part of the Yankee brain-trust. Elston Howard and Dick Howser were rehired for their eighth year on the coaching staff, but the club is searching for a pitching coach to replace ailing White Ford.

"I want Yogi on the bench with me," said Martin via a telephone hookup at a conference called for the announcement of Berra's one-year contract. "He'll help me correct things as we go along. A coach can do things a lot easier than a manager. Things like personal contacts with the players."

Berra, whose uniform number was retired in 1972, was a Yankee player from 1946 through 1963 and led the team to an American League pennant in 1964 as a bench manager. He was the A.L.'s most valuable player three times, batted a career .285 with the Yanks, hit 358 homers and drove in 1,430 runs.

"Really, I didn't know exactly where I would be coaching until Billy just mentioned that I'd be on the bench with him," said the gravel-voiced Berra. Berra said he was happy about returning to the Yanks "because it's a whole new regime there."

DeBuschere blasts NBA's draft

ABA Commissioner Dave DeBuschere Friday blasted the National Basketball Association's plan to hold a special draft of five American Basketball Association players and urged the older league to reconsider its plans.

The NBA plans to hold a special draft Tuesday of five current ABA players whose college classes have not yet graduated. The five — Moses Malone, Mel Bennett, Charlie Jordan, Skip Wise and Mark Olberding — never applied for NBA hardship status so they were never eligible for the league's draft.

"This act coming in the midst of our playing season, can be for no other purpose than to cause dissension and unrest among our players and fans at a time in our history when the league has undergone severe setbacks and to make it appear that the ABA will not continue to operate," DeBuschere charged.

Arkansas, A&M play showdown

Texas quarterback Marty Akins, sidelined with an injury during the Longhorns painful loss to Texas A&M last week comments on today's showdown between A&M and Arkansas. "It must be Texas A&M's year," said Akins, whose right knee is so badly sprained that his presence is questionable for the Longhorns' Astro-Bluebonnet Bowl date with Colorado Dec. 27.

"Nobody gets to play them at full strength. I think Arkansas could give them a good game and maybe beat them if they were at full strength. I kind of look for A&M to win, but Arkansas is alwways tough at home and they will be especially tough playing for the Southwest Conference championship and before a national television audience."

Avellini probable Bears' starter

Returning to Soldier Field where they own a 2-3 NFL record, the Chicago Bears open a two-game home stand Sunday against the Detroit Lions at 1:05 p.m. Winless on the road and limping back to Chicago after a three-week road trip to San Francisco, Los Angeles and Green Bay, the Bears are looking for revenge after being intimidated at the Lions' new Pontiac Stadium, 27-7 in October.

In that game surprise Detroit starter Bill Munson hit on 16 of 20 first-half passes for 123 yards and two touchdowns and the Lions coasted in the second half. The Bears aided the Detroit cause with five defensive offsides penalties in the first 30 minutes of play. The young Bears, with 17 NFL rookies expected to see action against the Lions, would like to provide they have grown up since then even though their 2-9 record indicates otherwise.

McCormick syndicate bids to save Giants

Former Cy Young award winning pitcher Mike McCormick said Friday his syndicate of Bay Area businessmen, put together this week, will be ready to make a solid offer to purchase the San Francisco Giants next week at the major league meetings in Hollywood, Fla.

"From the commitments we have," McCormick said, "I'm confident we can purchase the club and keep it in San Francisco." McCormick, who won the National League Cy Young award in 1967 after posting a 22-10 record with the Giants, has worked as a stock broker since retiring from baseball, and more recently as an executive with an electronics concern in nearby Redwood City.

"I'm aware there are other groups interested in purchasing the club and keeping it in San Francisco," McCormick said. "But from what I hear they are having trouble raising the necessary capital. I think my group can meet the asking price, and if we can't, I wouldn't be adverse to combining with the other groups still in the running.

"We share the same goal — to keep the Giants in San Francisco where they belong. I'm confident we can get a good hearing from the league on our offer."

Walker offers ChiSox assistance

Illinois Gov. Daniel Walker Friday urged the American League to keep the Chicago White Sox in Chicago. He also offered his assistance to the league president and a prospective buyer.

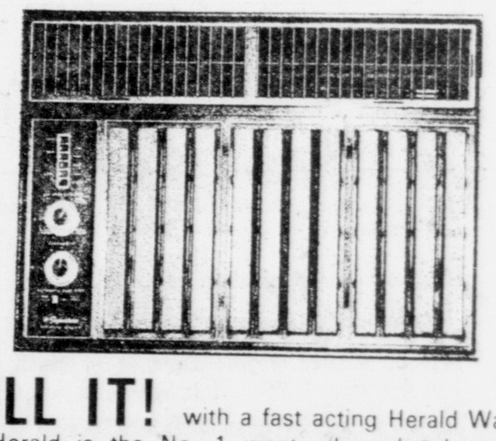

Walker sent a telegram to League President Lawrence MacPhail saying, "Chicago must continue to be represented in both the National League and the American League. If there are any steps that I can take to insure baseball continuity in Chicago in the American League, please let me know."

He also wired Bill Veeck, who is trying to buy the team and keep it in Chicago. "You and the White Sox belong in Chicago," Walker told him.

SAVED BY THE SIGN. With the Illinois shotgun deer season scheduled to reopen next weekend, this fawn appears to have found a safe place to wait out the storm of hunters in the field

Record whitetail harvests may be history

Deer herd nearing maximum size

Illinois shotgun hunters are expected to complete another record deer harvest next weekend when the second half of the split six-day campaign is conducted Dec. 12, 13 and 14.

The opening three days of the 1975 hunt (Nov. 21, 22 and 23) resulted in 11,613 whitetails taken by gunners. With any stroke of luck from the weatherman, the old mark of 14,080 in 1974 will easily be eclipsed.

The same record forecast has accompanied hunters into the field for the past 18 years — ever since the first deer hunting season was announced in 1957. And, for the most part, shotgunners have supported the predictions with a higher deer-kill total.

How long can we expect the record harvests to continue?

That question was posed to Jack Calhoun, long-time staff wildlife biologist for the Illinois Dept. of Conservation in Springfield, who hinted that deer hunters may be reaching the peak of whitetail harvests.

"The actual number of deer in Illinois is really inconsequential to us," the head of the state's deer management program said. "What is significant is whether the herd increases or decreases from year to year and the sex-to-age ratio.

"Hunting is the only way we know of to control a deer herd and it seems like we have the maximum amount of deer in most areas already."

One exception is the Shawnee National Forest herd that can afford to increase in the future, but elsewhere, the number of whitetails has achieved its limit.

The limit, in this case, is not the ideal ratio of deer per acre of square mile. Instead, the maximum number of deer is what the Illinois farmer will tolerate.

"Illinois will never realize the 100,000 deer harvests of Wisconsin or Michigan," Calhoun said. "Wisconsin, for example, is primarily dairy farms while Illinois is almost entirely corn and bean farms."

The habitat is a virtual paradise for the whitetail and it shows in the deer's diet. The average weight of an Illinois deer is 20-25 pounds heavier than those in the far northern or southern states — a direct reflection upon abundant nutrition.

"Crop depredation is a serious problem in Illinois," Calhoun said. "A game refuge, for example, that is owned by someone who doesn't permit hunting, without fail, will become a deer depredation area.

"We've tried other means of controlling the deer herd — repellants and trapping — but the only successful way of manipulating its growth is by hunting."

When an area experiences too great an increase in deer population, Calhoun recommends increasing the hunting quotas in a particular county or counties.

By recording such data as the deer's sex, age, weight, the number of deer taken and the number of shots fired from each hunter who brings a whitetail to a claiming station, Calhoun can determine what direction the deer herd is heading.

"We can recognize an overkill immediately," Calhoun said, "when we see too many young animals taken. We can anticpate a decrease in yearlings the following year."

Still another significant statistic is the deer road-kill count which annually exceeds the number taken by archers. In 1973, bow and arrow hunters bagged 960 whitetails while 1,159 were killed on the state's highways

And even this figure is probably inaccurate, according to Calhoun. "I don't know whether it's because of the recession or what," he said, "but we're just not getting those statistics anymore.

"We do keep track of the reports that are made, but I'm sure there are a lot of road kills where people are just picking up the animals and not reporting anything."

That though alone could make record deer harvests a thing of the past.

Competitive 'meat' shoots spotlight expert marksmen

by VIC WATIA

Busting clay birds can put meat in the pot, at least for some trap shooters who attend "turkey" or "roast" shoots.

The "meat" shoots, as they often are called, are a popular pastime for thousands of trap shooters throughout the country who use them as an incentive for showing their skills.

A visit to the Herscher Sportsman Club in Buckingham, Ill. when an open trap shoot was underway gave some insight into such contests.

The Herscher club is a simple arrangement. A small white block house serves as a combination office and refreshment stand.

A tin-roofed trap house sends clay targets skyward against a cornfield backdrop.

But one can't judge the quality of the shooters by the simple rural setting.

A glance at the patches on shooting jackets worn by some of the contestants showed they were accomplished in their sport.

"See the scare patches on his jacket," remarked one shooter. "They show he has broken 100 straight targets. He wears the patches to try and rattle some of the other shooters."

But, most serious trap shooters are not bothered by such moves.

In "meat" shoots, contestants pay a small fee to compete in shootoffs for such prizes as chickens, turkeys, roasts, bacon or other items.

"It's not that the prize is so big," said one shooter competing for a beef roast. "It's just sort of a reward for a good performance."

Another shooter commented, "When I first started shooting trap, I just wanted to break 25 targets in a row. After I did that, I wanted to break 50 straight, then 100. Now I've done all those and it's not as much fun to go out and break 25 straight without any incentive."

Shooting for meat prizes are not the only way for trap shooters to test their skills.

Besides individual and two-man competition, shooters at the Herscher club competed in a cut-throat "Annie Oakley" shoot where entry fees minus the cost of the targets went to the winner.

Individual competition varies, but usually at such shoots the man who breaks the most targets out of 10 birds — two from each of five stations — is the winner. In the case of ties, the shooters keep moving back greater distances until a winner is determined.

The distance at the shoots usually vary from 16 to 27 yards, but often ends at much farther distances, especially in order to break a tie.

In two-man competition for prizes, two shooters team up, one serving as backup in case his partner misses the bird. In such contests, the partners alternate in serving as backup shooters for each other, each taking their turn at calling "pull" for the bird.

The backup partner must be careful not to "double gun" — fire after his partner has broken the bird — or the bird does not count.

The "Annie Oakley" competition varies, and the one held at Herscher was with a two-man backup.

It is cut-throat competition because when each shooter calls "pull" for his bird, two other shooters are waiting for a chance at the target if he misses.

For instance, if the man calling "pull" misses, the next man then tries to hit the bird. If he does, he eliminates the first man. If the first and second man both miss the bird, the next man gets a chance. If the third man hits the target he eliminates both the other shooters. If he misses, all three remain in the shoot.

This keeps up along the row of contestants, each taking a turn calling a bird, until only one man remains. Often, the field is narrowed to only two men, who may agree to quit and split the prize money.

Small contests such as those held at the Herscher club do not provide any big monetary awards. However, they continue as a popular pastime throughout the country.

Booklet details regulations for snowmobilers

Since the sport of snowmobiling has "snowballed" in recent years, the Illinois Section of the Institute of Traffic Engineers is concerned with the safe operation of this vehicle.

The snowmobiler is reminded to use common sense when operating this vehicle. Remember that excessive speed, careless or reckless driving can cause damage and serious injury and that the greatest cause of accidents while snowmobiling is attributed to driving while intoxicated.

No one under the age of 10 may operate a snowmobile. Those between 10 and 12 years may operate a snowmobile provided he is accompanied by a parent or guardian or someone so designated who is at least 18 years old.

Operators between 12 and 16 may operate a snowmobile if he is accompanied by a parent or guardian or someone so designated and is at least 16 years old or has a certificate issued by the Secretary of State.

All snowmobiles must be equipped with one white headlamp and one red tail lamp, each visible within 500 feet of the vehicle during darkness. These vehicles must also be equipped with 16 square inches of reflective material on each side of the cowl and noise muffler system.

For additional information on snowmobiling, obtain a copy of the Illinois Digest and Snowmobile Safety Handbook issued by the Illinois Dept. of Conservation.

AUDI-Fox 1973

PEARL HARBOR, 1941. This is how the American base looked to Japanese bombers on Sunday morning, Dec. 7, 1941. The photo appears in Life's Bicentennial issue as one of "The 100 Events That Shaped America."

Area man tells painful memories

Pearl Harbor's scars remain

U.S.S. Arizona took more than 1,000 men to watery graves.

It was 7:55 a.m.

Japan had attacked the United States.

WE WERE AT WAR.

Hartman, the gunner's mate from Altonna, Pa., was 23 years old, too young to die. But there seemed so little chance of survival.

"We all thought it was the end," Hartman said. You can tell the memories have left many deep scars.

Friends began to fall around him. Bill Hartman began to run. He could not stop to see if they were alive or dead.

"I'll never forget this," Hartman began. "We used to have lots of pets on base. I ran for the mess hall. On the way, I passed a dog. That dog was running, but I was running faster."

The story is old. It is written how the Japanese took Pearl Harbor by surprise, and how the Americans refused to believe their own radar or heed warnings from the U.S.S. Shaw which earlier that morning had sunk a Japanese submarine.

PEARL HARBOR sat majestic in the Pacific Ocean, our fortress against the world, a most awesome display of power. Only the most foolhardy opponent would question the strength of America's Pacific Fleet.

They sincerely believed that in Washington, D.C. And in Tokyo, too. That's why the Japanese attacked. They figured everybody knew it could never happen.

Of course, they were right.

American aircraft carriers had just shipped out of Pearl. That was our saving grace.

More than 2,403 Americans would die. More than 347 planes would be destroyed. More than just the great battleships Arizona and Utah plus many other ships would be sunk.

Perhaps America might have lost the war.

WITHOUT A PACIFIC Fleet, there was no western defense.

But the men on Pearl Harbor were not thinking about that early on Sunday morning, Dec. 7, 1941.

They thought only about staying alive.

"It scared hell out of me," said Hartman who would complete a 20-year U.S. Navy career.

There were men shouting, "We'll all be dead!"

Pearl Harbor, the indomitable fortress, began to die. Japanese submarines attacked its harbors. The zeros relentlessly killed from above.

THE AMERICANS were slow to retaliate. Confusion ruled. Guns were not ready. Ammunition lockers had not been unlocked. Men were killed in their sleep. And in church, too.

Hartman finally manned a gun. The men at his position were credited with shooting down three zeros. Hartman is not positive he claimed an enemy plane.

"I wish I could say for sure," he said, "but I can't."

The massacre at Pearl Harbor ended before 10 a.m. Men who survived manned the beaches that night. A Japanese land invasion was expected.

Rifles were not available for every man. Some were given billy clubs as their only weapons.

When night came, the confused Americans began shooting at their own planes.

PEARL HARBOR had been broken.

History will never record what might have happened if the Americans believed their radar. "We would have knocked hell out of them," said Hartman, now a security officer in Deerfield.

"With the ships we had, we would have suffered light damage. They wouldn't even have gotten in the harbor."

Bill Hartman is like so many Americans who fought at Pearl Harbor or Iwo Jima, Guam, Okinawa or Normandy. They have trouble talking about it.

"It brings back thoughts you want to forget," he said. "The more you dwell on them, it only aggravates the situation."

Sunday is Pearl Harbor's 34th anniversary. For most Americans, this will be just another day spent at home, away from the office, away from school, a day without the normal aggravations.

The men from Pearl Harbor would like to forget. On Sunday, they must remember.

New plates 'selling like hot cakes'

by JILL BETTNER

Hurrah! The long-awaited Bicentennial is here at last ushered in a little early with special 1976 Illinois auto license plates in Uncle Sam's favorite colors — red, white and blue.

The Old Glory motif, complete with stars and stripes, is being used by every state this year. The Illinois plates are bound to draw some groans from those who feel commercialism is spoiling the nation's 200th birthday, but so far, they're selling very well here.

In fact, since over-the-counter sales began Monday at banks and currency exchanges throughout the Northwest suburbs, record numbers of early customers have already purchased plates.

IT SEEMS THAT at least some in that normally large group of motorists who wait until the Feb. 15 deadline every year to buy plates are a little more willing than usual to plunk down the $18 or $30 for one of the special sets.

At the Mount Prospect State Bank, one teller said she was shocked at the number of early buyers.

"The sales are going super fantastic," she said. "I've been here four years and I've never seen such a rush the first day. We sold at least 450 plates just on Monday. I really think it must be because people want to keep them because of the Bicentennial and everything."

"I think most people like the plates and they're anxious to see the colors and what they look like," said a Woodfield Bank teller. "Our sales are 100 per cent better than they were last year."

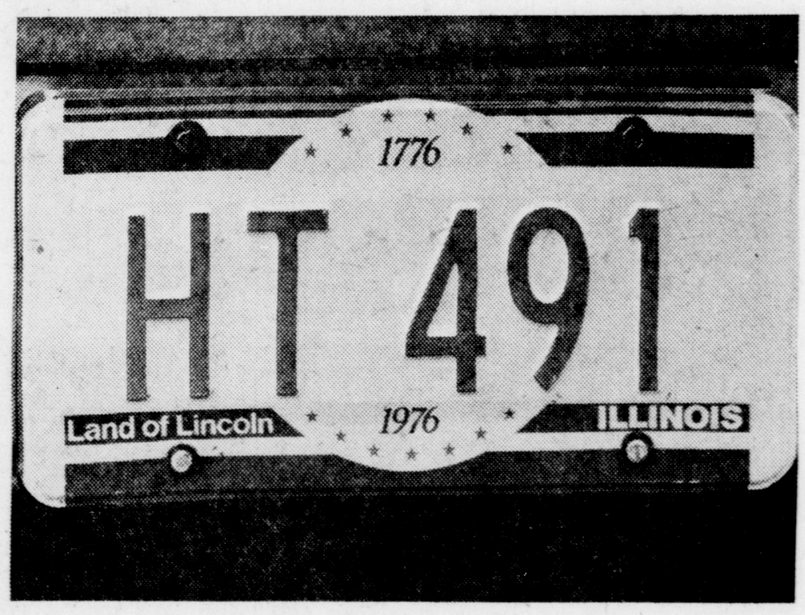

HE ADDED THAT although he feels the special Bicentennial plates are part of the reason for the early rush of customers, there are a number of buyers who want plates with lower numbers "because they're easier to memorize."

"There are always some people who get them right away, but people are definitely coming in sooner than usual," he said.

Another incentive for some motorists to buy early is the change to get plates with prefixes identifying their hometowns. At banks offering plates with prefixes such as AH, MP and BG, sales are especially high.

According to the Illinois Secretary of State's office, 1976 auto license plates are available at a record 398 banks and savings and loan associations in the Chicago area this year, along with 650 currency exchanges.

A spokesman for the office urged motorists to use the pre-printed renewal applications when buying plates. The forms were mailed last summer to all registered car owners. Notarization is not required to purchase plates.

Organ donors get driver's license I.D.

Persons who plan to give their kidneys, eyes or other body parts for transplant after they die, may now have a sticker placed on the back of their Illinois driver's license.

The sticker will state the owner of the license will be carrying an Anatomical Gift Card in the event of accidental death, Sec. of State Michael Howlett said.

The stickers will be provided by organ donor associations which make arrangements for persons to donate body parts.

Photos may go on drivers' licenses

Work on implementing a new system for Illinois drivers' licenses which include photographs will begin soon, said Sec. of State Michael Howlett.

The new program has been delayed because funds needed to develop a statewide system of computer terminals has been held up by an amendatory veto by Gov. Daniel Walker.

Walker used his amendatory veto to transfer the $1.2 million appropriation for the program from the state's general fund to the road funds. It was necessary for the Illinois General Assembly to approve the change before the funds could be released.

Howlett said additional funds for the program will be requested next year. Officials cannot say when Illinois drivers will have their pictures taken for the new licenses.

Go to the woods for your tree this Christmas

Want a little extra fun this Christmas? Chop down your own tree.

Some tree farms have raised prices slightly this year but you can still save money on trees selling for as little as $5. Most of the farms are open during daylight hours through Christmas Eve. Farmers suggest you bring a saw and dress warmly, prepared to search the fields for the tree you want. Some of them will lend you a saw if you don't have your own.

If you cross the state line to get a tree in Wisconsin, remember the Wisconsin Dept. of Natural Resources will stop cars loaded with trees and ask occupants for proof of legitimacy. The department warns there are no unowned trees in Wisconsin.

When stopped you will have to show a sales receipt for the tree, your last year's property tax receipt to verify you own the Wisconsin property where the tree was cut or have a letter of permission from the landowner.

The Ill. Dept. of Conservation suggests you bring a rope to tie the tree to the car. The department also recommends putting the tree in a bucket of water in a cool, shaded area, sheltered from the wind, if you do not set it up immediately.

Just before putting the tree in its stand, cut about an inch off the trunk at the base. A tree stand filled with water will help prevent needle drop and add to the tree's fire resistance. Using a bucket of wet sand will also help keep a tree fresh. A pint to a quart of water should be added to the stand each day; keep the water at a level above the bottom of the tree.

Here is a list of tree farms nearby where you can cut down your own tannenbaum:

• Ronald Gengel, Fairfield Road, ½ mile north of Ill. Rte. 132, Lake Villa; 356-5661; scotch pine, $7; daylight hours through Dec. 24.

• D. O. Van Ness, Indian Creek Road, ¾ miles west of Diamond Lake Road, Mundelein; 566-7726; Norway pine, scotch pine, jack pine, $5; daylight to 3 p.m. through Dec. 24.

• Don Norris, Bliss and Norris roads, 4 miles west of Sugar Grove; 466-4278; cedar, white pine, red pine, jack pine, $5; daylight hours through Dec. 24.

• Whispering Sands, Hintz Road ¾ miles west of Ill. Rte. 102, Wilmington; 815-476-9275; red pine, white pine, scotch pine, jack pine, cedar, spruce, $6 and up; spruce are $6 for 4-foot plus $1 per additional foot; daylight hours through Dec. 24.

• Oney's Christmas Tree Farm, 16608 Rte. 14, between Woodstock and Harvard; 815-338-4108; red pine, white pine, scotch pine, $7; 9 a.m. to sundown through Dec. 24.

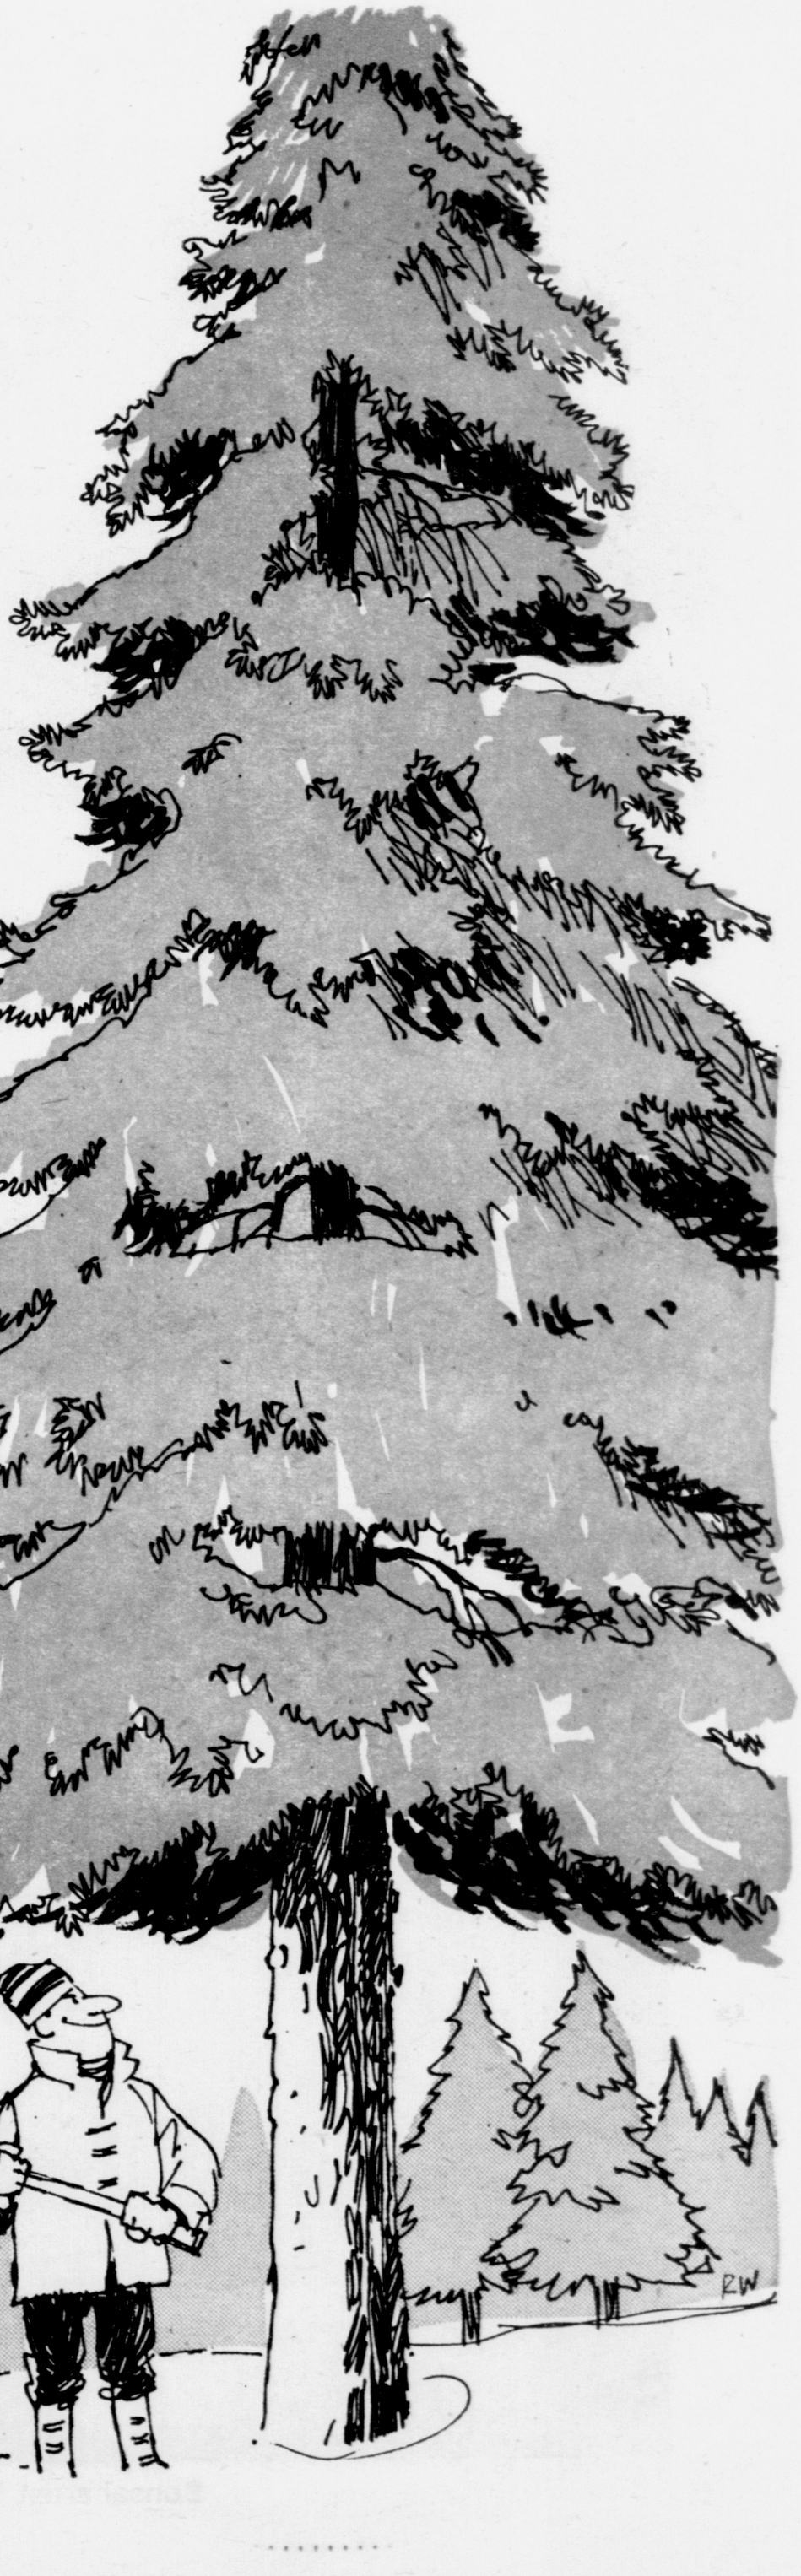

• Charles M. Burlingham, 2 S. 341 Finley Rd., Lombard; 627-4123; white pine, scotch pine; Douglas, Concolar and Frazer firs, $8 for most trees; open daylight hours through Dec. 24.

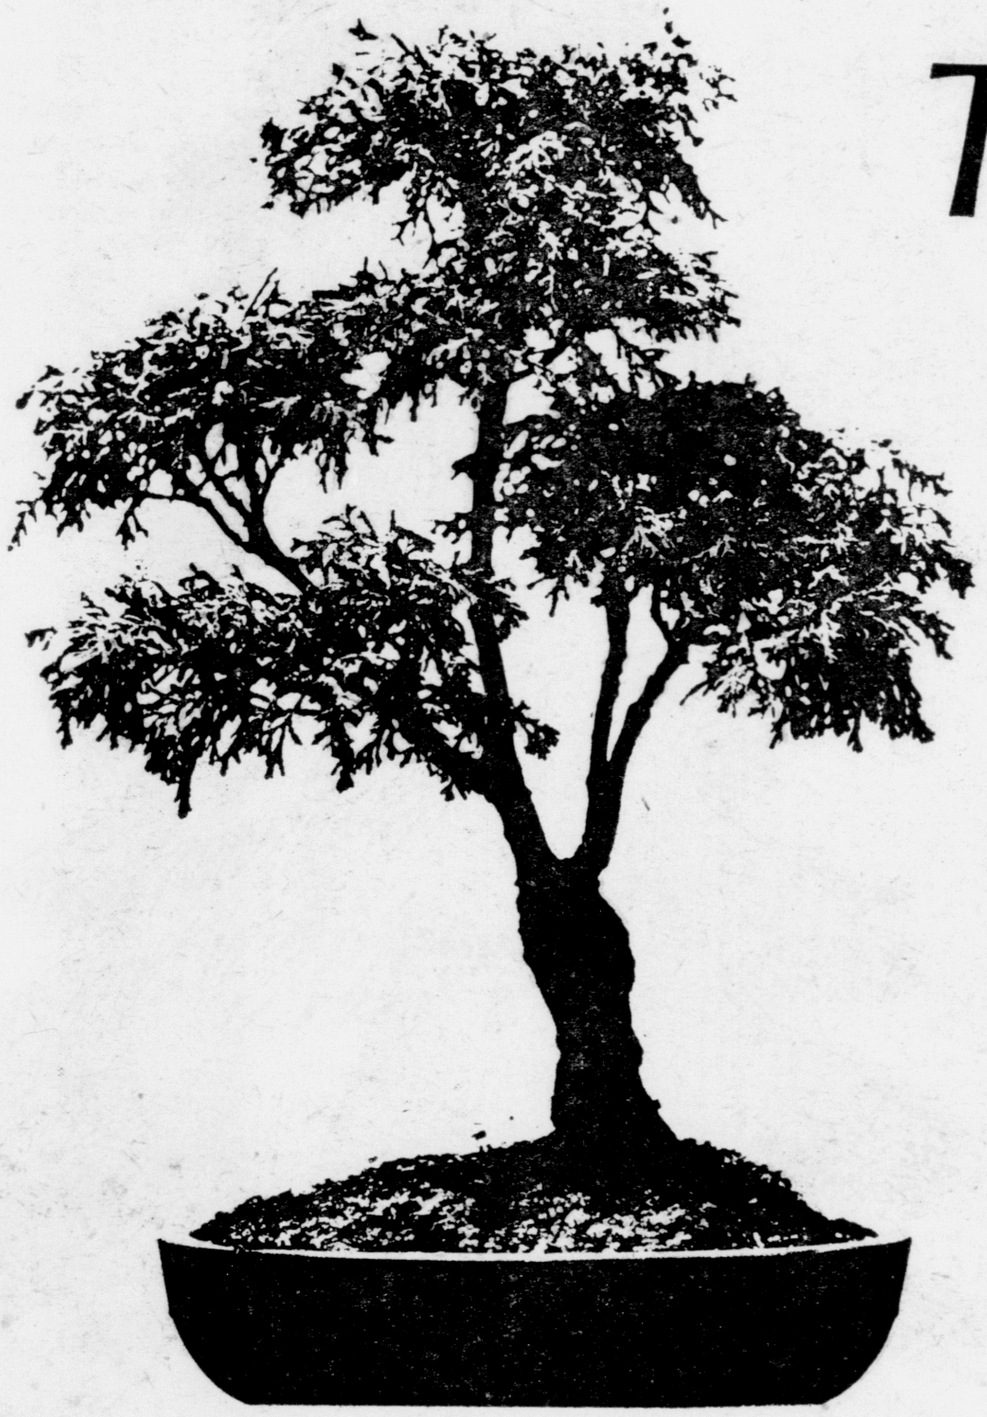

• Tammen Tree Berry Farm, Essex Road, 3½ miles south of Ill. Rte. 113; Wilmington; 815-939-4060; scotch pine, white pine, $6.67 plus tax; 8 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. until Dec. 24.

• Ide Tree Farm, 1500 83rd St., south of Downers Grove; 968-5786; white pine, scotch pine, Norway pine, Norway spruce, $8; 9:30 a.m. to 4 p.m. through Dec. 24.

• Marmion Abbey, Ill. Rte. 56 one mile east of North Aurora; 897-7215; red pine, white pine, scotch pine, $8 donation used for missionary work; 9:30 a.m. to sundown through Dec. 23.

• Hayden's Christmas Tree Farm, Hunt Club Road, ½ mile west of Rte. 94, east of Antioch; 394-4127; red pine, scotch pine, cedar, $10; open daylight hours through Dec. 24.

The small world of Bonsai

by Anne Slavicek

Its roots anchored in rock against the weather, the mighty juniper bends to the ground away from the pressure of prevailing winds. Nearby a grove of maples is highlighted by the sun, each perfect leaf a different shade of orange or gold. Not far away tiny white flowers make an impressive bouquet among the leaves of the varigated Serissa.

This garden is not some freak of nature in a far-off land. It's a collection of miniature trees in pots, perfectly proportioned through the Oriental art of bonsai to look like much larger cousins of the same varieties.

In Japan where a large population must share a relatively small country, bonsai developed as a way to commune with nature on a small scale.

Today in the urban and suburban areas around Chicago a similar crowding of people has led to new interest in bonsai as an art and as a way to escape from the flat Illinois landscape, brick apartment buildings and the monotony of housing subdivisions.

"Interest in bonsai is doubling and tripling" says Robert Maxson, a past president of the American Bonsai Society, who has been involved in growing and studying the dwarfed trees for 25 years.

Maxson, who runs the bonsai division of the D. Hill Nursery in Dundee, ascribes the popularity of the art both to the continual challenge involved in growing bonsai and to the big boom in house plants.

Unlike growing a vegetable garden bonsai takes artistic ability, Maxson says, as well as an understanding of basic horticulture.

People learn about the art from books, by joining organizations, and even from acquiring one of the miniatures as a gift and having to learn to care for it.

Maxson calls bonsai "a four dimensional art form" because the living trees go through seasonal changes, and grow each year. "You're always looking for perfection, but you never achieve it. "Bonsai takes involvement, he explains "you can't just stick it on a mantel to gather dust."

The goal of bonsai is to grow a tiny tree in proportion to a landscape created by its container and perhaps by stones. It should suggest more than what it really is, Maxson says, giving an impression of age with rough mature bark and heavy surface roots.

Some bonsai hobbyists pay too much attention to actual age of the tiny trees, Maxson says, marvelling at how a 50 year old tree can be less than two feet tall.

Yet what is important, Maxson says, is creating an appearance of age, whether the tree is five years old or a hundred.

Age is mimicked by removing branches, pruning roots to keep the tree small and in the same container, repotting with roots exposed and using annealed copper wire to make young branches droop as they would when they became heavy with age.

The right illusion is critical, Maxson says. A young evergreen a foot tall is bushy like the traditional Christmas tree with upturned branches. The same tree with many branches removed to reveal the trunk and with the branches reshaped becomes a stately old pine standing alone at the edge of the forest.

Bonsai enthusiasts both grow and shape their own plants from seedlings and buy and care for older trees which have been dwarfed over a period of years.

All bonsai require pruning every growing season and must be removed from the pot to have their roots trimmed every few years. Some, like maples and varieties of elms, must be allowed to go dormant in the winter. But evergreens and tropical plants can go from a patio indoors for the Illinois winter.

Bonsai by definition includes only plants grown in containers. A related art, Saikei, uses rocks as a major part of a miniature landscape with bonsai plants to complete the image.

Maxson says," Any plant can be grown in a container and can be dwarfed." But plants with woody stems and with small leaves, small fruit and little flowers lend themselves more easily to the art.

Maxson and other bonsai specialists at the nursery in Dundee are experimenting with geraniums and with ivys to create bonsai which will do well indoors year round under a variety of light conditions.

They even have used a growth retardant on the common houseplant "baby tears" to allow its use in landscapes in place of moss which won't survive in a dry apartment.

More traditional bonsai plants include short needled pines and fine textured junipers. They are also among the easiest to grow.

Other plants Maxson has found successful include:

- A dwarf variety of pomegranate which has impressive red-orange flowers and bears fruit;
- Serissa, both variegated and all green varieties, which are tropical bushes which bear white flowers throughout the summer and can live indoors;
- Boxwood trees, varieties of the fig tree family with small leaves, and ginkgo trees;
- Azaleas. particularly woody varieties;
- Elms including the Catlin elm which is evergreen, and chinese elms:
- Singapore holly which has the traditional holly shaped leaves and berries even though it's not really a holly;
- Myrtle which bears black berries;
- Cotoneaster which gets both white flowers and red berries, crabapples, burning bush, and fire thorn; and
- Alberta spruce, a genetic dwarf discovered in Canada 75 years ago.

Robert Maxson with an evergreen he will convert to a bonsai

In their natural state some of the trees would grow to mammoth size. Others like the Alberta spruce would take 50 years to reach 5 feet in height.

The shaping of the plant requires judgment. So does choosing a container that will be in proportion to the plant and getting the wires off before they scar the trunk but after they have finished their work of shaping branches.

Proportion is also important in pruning the plant each year and in trimming the roots. Ideally if you cut off 60 per cent of the foliage you should trim the same amount of root growth away, Maxson says.

Following the natural lines of the plant is one critical axiom, he says. Sometimes a plant can be made to look as though it has endured a particular climatic condition such as hanging on the side of a cliff. Other times growers will purposely create a "jin" or dead branch to mimic what lightning might do in nature.

Bonsai also require fertilizer — Maxson suggests once a week with a half strength solution of common house plant fertilizer — and need to be watered thoroughly whenever the soil dries out.

Bonsai should always be exhibited at eye level, against a plain background, Maxson suggests. Some people use special stands to set off the plant and its container from its surroundings, he says.

Maxson, who began studying bonsai before there were any books on the art printed in English, has trees that he's cared for 15 and 20 years. In 1967 he attended a three-week seminar in Japan where he studied with Kyuzo Murata, the keeper of the bonsai collection owned by the emperor of Japan.

Although Maxson's been with the D. Hill Nursery only for three years, the nursery also has a long history of involvement with bonsai.

The nursery first was linked to Japan in 1902 when Arthur Hill went there on a plant exploration trip to bring back plants which hadn't been grown in this country before.

While the nursery is chiefly a wholesaler of full size evergreens, it was also one of the pioneers of bonsai in the U.S. Every year it hosts a bonsai festival the third weekend in August.

Maxson is particularly proud of the dwarf Japanese garden juniper he calls "The Patriarch." A symbol for the nursery, it is a plant that Arthur Hill brought back to Dundee in 1902 and which had been planted outside over the years and used as a stock plant to produce other trees.

Maxson estimates the plant produced 30,000 other trees before he put it into a container to make it a bonsai.

Maxson argues with the popular image that bonsai is an expensive hobby. His nursery sells the trees already root trimmed and shaped in a pot for $10 on up, with $30 as an average price. But the trees will live for years, he points out, unlike many houseplants or cut flowers.

For those who want to try the art themselves a five year old Alberta Spruce costs $2. With a $2 pot and the soil you need, you can get involved in bonsai for as little as $5.

Maxson urges hobbyists to read books on the subject and to attend demonstrations like those sponsored by the Midwest Bonsai Society and by the nursery.

The society meets at 7 p.m. the first Monday of each month at the Botanic Garden of the Chicago Horticultural Society, 775 Dundee Road, east of the Edens expressway in Glencoe. It is one way to meet other hobbyists.

Visitors are welcome to attend the meetings which often include lectures, demonstrations and workshops.

For beginners Maxson recommends either a Sunset paperback book, "Bonsai — Culture and Care" or "The Japanese Art of Miniature Trees and Landscapes" by Yuji Yoshimura and Giovanna Halford.

Information on the American Bonsai Society, a non-profit corporation which publishes magazines and hosts symposiums, is available by writing the society at 953 South Shore Drive, Lake Waukomis, Parkville, Missouri 64151

A trip to the D. Hill nursery, Routes 72 and 31 in Dundee, is another way to get acquainted with the hobby. In addition to a large selection of bonsai trees which would make interesting gifts, the nursery offers a mailable $8.75 kit to make your own bonsai which includes everything you need including a tree, pot soil, fertilizer and wire.

A selection of tools for bonsai, pots, untrimmed trees suitable for the art and books are also sold at the nursery.

Maxson also gives lectures on the art to groups including garden clubs and can be contacted at the nursery.

Old-world village display at Woodstock

An Old World Christmas Village, with houses, shops and cobblestone streets, is on display at the city square in Woodstock.

Tom Byrnes, publisher of children's verses, started assembling the miniature village more than a decade ago. The village includes windmills and carousels that turn, a tobaggan slide with coasting figures, an old fashioned train and a variety of Dickensian figures.

The display fills Woodstock's bandshell, just east of U.S. Rte. 14 and Dean Street.

801 W. DUNDEE, ARLINGTON HEIGHTS 255-9610

by Gerry Kern

It was a cool, clear and calm night in December, 1877 when Italian astronomer Giovanni Schiaparelli turned his exquisite telescope perched in his Milan observatory toward Mars.

Carefully adjusting the focus of the instrument, the astronomer slowly discerned a remarkable feature on the planet wholly unseen in nature: long, straight lines, some parallel, stretching thousands of miles across the red deserts, connecting gray-green "seas" along the way.

Schiaparelli called them "canali" — Italian for "channels."

But scholars translating his discovery into English called them "canals" — artificial structures built by men for carrying water for irrigation and transportation.

And with that error in translation, speculation that Mars was inhabited by a race of intelligent Martians ran rampant. The controversy about the possibility of life on Mars continues to this day.

An enigma hidden in a riddle, cloaked in mystery, Mars is back in our evening skies. The brilliant copper-red beacon is this year's Christmas Star, rising in the east in the constellation Taurus, the Bull and easily seen by 8 p.m. It is high in the southeast by midnight — an unmistakenly red point of light.

Somewhere in the gulf of interplanetary space between us and that red dot, two silent Viking space probes are hurtling toward a July 4 rendezvous with the planet which could finally answer the question: Is there life on Mars? It is a mission whose origins can be traced back to that night Schiaparelli saw his now-famous channels.

Mars' appearance in the evening skies marks the first time since 1973 that it has been favorably placed for observation and already has sent scores of amateur astronomers to their telescopes to glimpse a few of the things Schiaparelli saw for the first time 98 years ago.

Most of the Mars-watchers hope Monday night will be clear. That's when the red planet will reach opposition with the Earth, its closest approach at 53 million miles. After that the distance between Earth and Mars will increase making observation difficult, but amateur astronomers should still be able to see the planet until the end of winter.

They won't get another look until 1977, the date of the next opposition. Because Mars is fixed in orbit farther from the sun than Earth, it takes two years to circle the sun. Earth overtakes it in space once during that two-year period and because Mars is so small (4,000 miles in diameter, about half the size of Earth), observation of the planet at any other time is nearly impossible.

Those who live in the far suburbs can get a better view of the planet than their counterparts in the city, who must contend with "light pollution." Anyone with an eastward view can see the planet, the brightest in the sky with the exception of Jupiter, a brillant white-yellow point of light much higher in the southeast sky.

But even to the experienced observer armed with a telescope ranging from 4 to 12 inches in aperture, Mars appears only as a red ball, topped by a shining white north polar cap and covered with numerous gray smudges. "Canals" — which are really an illusion caused when the human eye connects a series of dark spots on the surface — can be glimpsed if the air is clear and still, and the observer is lucky.

Although Martian surface features may appear only as smudges, what lies within their ill-defined boundaries is mind-boggling.

Mars is a place where volcanic mountains nearly the size of Illinois rise above the plains literally into outer space. It is a place where winds blast at up to 300 miles an hour and dust storms can swallow the entire planet. Gaping canyons and rift valleys that would stretch from Labrador to Florida on Earth cut deeply into the layers of rock and dust. Mars is a strange world.

Ever since Schiaparelli saw those long channels reaching across thousands of miles, Mars has been the focus of incredible wonderment and even fear.

Inspired by the discoveries, American astronomer Perciful Lowell built an observatory in Flagstaff, Arizona in the 1890's and devoted the rest of his life to mapping the canals which crisscross Mars.

Lowell, convinced that the canals were built by a civilization of super-engineers, painted a picture of a dying planet where water was at a premium.

Accordingly, he believed, the Martians built an extensive network of water-carrying canals and pumping stations to bring the source of life from the polar regions, where water was abundant, to the equator, parched and seemingly lifeless.

Lowell died believing men of some sort inhabited Mars.

Other astronomers reported that the dark areas on Mars changed colors with the seasons and shrinking of the polar cap. They said the dark areas become green in the spring and brown in the fall of the Martian year. The "only" explanation, they said, was that the dark areas were massive fields of vegetation, fluctuating with the availability of water and the rotation of the seasons.

Constant speculation about life on our near planetary neighbor made "little green men" a part of our folklore. Lowell's Martians inspired a whole series of science fiction literature, some of the best known by Edgar Rice Burroughs, whose mythical people called their planet "Barsoom." Barsoom was a world of ancient marshy seas bottoms, six-legged beasts of burden and men of all colors, including green.

In 1938, Orson Wells capitalized on that fascination with his historic radio dramatization of H. G. Wells' "The War of the Worlds" which frightened the wits out of thousands who heard and believed Martians had invaded Earth because their homeland was becoming too dry to support their civilization.

Yet, gradually the weight of 20th century scientific evidence began to tip the scales against the case for life on Mars.

The Martian atmosphere is only one per cent that of Earth's; it contains no free oxygen, needed by Earth-style animals, and permits deadly ultraviolet radiation to penetrate to the surface — enough to kill life as we know it.

Temperatures rarely reach 80 degrees Fahrenheit at the equator during summer and plunge far below freezing at night.

Water is so scarce that if spread evenly across the surface, it would constitute an "ocean" only as deep as the thinnest tissue paper. And if that is not discouraging enough, liquid water cannot exist on Mars because its atmospheric pressure is so low.

For all intent and purpose, Mars looked about as dead and inhospitable as the moon.

They thought that until 1971.

In November of that year Mariner 9, a small but efficient space probe, was inserted into Martian orbit after 157 days of interplanetary travel. Its mission was to map the seemingly inactive surface of Mars.

During the first two months of orbit, a global dust storm broke out, obscuring the whole planet from Mariner's cameras.

But by the end of December the dust had begun to settle, revealing a landscape so bizarre and awesom that it dwarfed all of the imagery and misconception Lowell and others had spread so freely.

Rounding the planet in orbit, Mariner spotted as many as 15 giant volcanoes, some standing 15 miles high — 10 miles higher than Mount Everest — and 300 miles across. The mouth of one volcano would be capable of swallowing Chicago and a few surrounding counties.

Below its cameras and in front of the popping eyes of NASA scientists was revealed a gargantuan canyon 3,000 miles long, 20,000 feet deep and 100 miles across — hundreds of times larger than the Grand Canyon of Arizona. All of these incredible geologic formations were found on a planet barely half the size of the earth.

But the most startling discovery of all was the sighting of a myriad of wandering channels, some small, some large, but all obviously cut by running water. These dry river beds, scientists concluded, are strong evidence that a very different kind of climate once existed on Mars — a climate which may have been capable of supporting life of some sort.

Some of the river beds discovered by the probe are much wider and deeper than the Mississippi or Nile rivers on Earth. Some of the largest are 40 miles wide and nearly 800 miles long with a rich system of tributaries. When water flowed in those channels, they must have been roaring torrents.

Scientists — having accepted the probable desolation of the red plant — were forced to rewrite their scenarios for life on Mars.

Carl Sagan, Cornell University astronomer and one of the leading experts on Mars, has proposed one theory called "precessional spring."

Mars, like Earth, wobbles about its poles, much like a spinning top wobbles around its axis. This wobbling

For Telly, good luck comes on horseback

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — If Telly Savalas' hair grew back chances are it would come in long, blond and curly.

And television's bald but golden Greek could fall into a manhole and come up with a handful of drachmas.

Recently, producer Howard Koch asked Savalas if he'd like to invest in a race horse to help out a friend. As a favor, the star of "Kojak" said sure, why not?

"I didn't know anything about horses," said Savalas on the set of his CBS-TV show the other day. "I still don't."

"I'm just a slob who goes to the track once in while, loses money and curses the breed. So I didn't pay much attention to the horse. One day Howard insisted I go out to the track and look at our racer.

"So all right, he's a horse. All horses look alike to me. Howard insisted I name him. So I did."

Telly revered his late father who took him to his first horse race as a boy in New York. He dubbed the nag "Telly's Pop" in honor of his father, not for the lollypops he devours on the show.

"It sounds weird," said the actor, "but from the moment I named him something happened to that horse."

Now Telly finds himself in the winner's circle every time his horse runs.

"Track officials tell me they never see the circle so crowded," he beamed. "All my friends and relatives are there to help us celebrate. He's a stretch runner so he comes from far back in every race. It's a real thrill.

"I love the track because I've been a gambler all my life."

Savalas will play the title role in "Nick The Greek" at Universal Pictures, the first Greek movie hero to come along since "Zorba." Telly is proud of his Hellenic background and will play Nick to the hilt.

"Nick always paid off," he said. "So have I. And I welcome the chance to put a gambling spirit on the screen. Win or lose, a real gambler has an attitude which transcends the gaming tables.

"It's the joy. The fun is not in winning or losing, it's the game that counts.

"I gamble all the time. I played Las Vegas, turned out a record album, sang for the Queen of England and directed myself in my own show. Either I've got a lot of gall or I'm a real gambler.

TELLY SAVALAS

"And remember this: my friend, Prince Philip and I spoke to one another in Greek at that royal appearance. He's a Greek prince you know. Not English.

"The secret to playing a gambler is never showing a quiver of emotion, no finger trembles. You can't tell by looking if a real gambler is loaded or busted, but he always dresses like he's got a million.

"A great gambler is a great con man at heart."

Savalas, who is not altogether without con, has increased his income by betting on "Telly's Pop." He enjoys his new-found prestige at the track where the railbirds are anxious to get inside dope on his charger.

"Only one thing bothers me," said Telly. "I'll never be able to collect stud fees from Telly's Pop when he's put out to pasture.

"When I bought him they told me he was a gelding. I thought that was a color they give to horses, like bays and roans. How was I to know that gelding meant he could never become a pappa himself?"

One of the things that happened to the 2-year-old bangtail was winning ways. In the past year it has entered six races and won five of them.

Telly paid $3,000 for the animal. To date it has won purses totaling $300,000.

"I'd rather be lucky than smart," Savalas said happily.

Shelby Lyman on chess

There is a longstanding notion that chess and military science have similar underlying principles. The image persists of generals and their officers playing and studying chess in order to enhance their understanding of military tactics and strategy.

Whatever the benefits of chess for military thinking, chess players from the military have made little impact on chess itself. For example, the few times the West Point chess team ventured to play exhibition matches with deliberately watered-down Marshall Chess Club teams, it has fared poorly.

Hint and explanation for Diagram 1: Here we have a modern example of an exquisite combination theme. Black's play, needless to say, is on the queen's file. Notice that black has an immediate checkmate but for the placement of his bishop. His first move is astonishing when seen for the first time.

World champion Anatoly Karpov rarely loses. His cautious style and determination forbid it. Thus any of his defeats or near defeats are of special interest. Here is one of the latter, played against Pritchett of Scotland in the 1974 Nice Chess Olympics.

Karpov, playing a much lower-rated player, stumbled badly when he played 22. P-B4?? in Diagram 2. But Pritchett then missed 22. . . . N-K7 check; 23. RxN, BxR; 24. QxB, QxBP; 25. B-B1, and 25. . . . Q-Q5 check with a substantial material advantage.

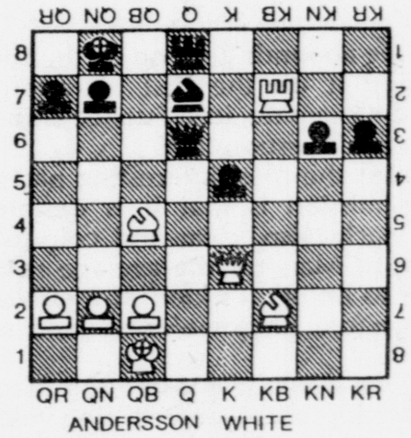

Naturally Karpov went on to win. This example reminds us once again that it takes more than one good move to win a single chess game.

BLACK KNUTSSON

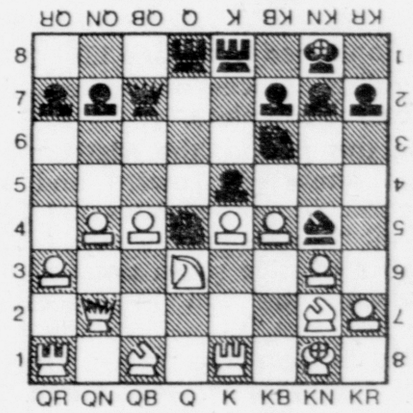

ANDERSSON WHITE

Black moves and wins. Solution below.

After 22. P-B4??

(Diagram 2)

BLACK PRITCHETT

KARPOV WHITE

Black can win material. How?

Answer to Solve It: Black's 1 . . . Q-Q8 check!!! is too much. After 2. KxQ, Knutsson's 2 . . . B-N5 double check sets up mate in one move. This is the classic illustration of the power of the double check.

Win at bridge

by Oswald and James Jacoby

A psychic bid is one designed to give misinformation. In the early '30s such bids were often called Jacobys because young Oswald Jacoby was known to bid them frequently.

Forty years later, old Oswald Jacoby has given them up, but Jim still tries one on occasion.

His one-spade bid in the East seat, made in a rubber bridge game turned out to be super-successful. It wasn't too risky. He wasn't vulnerable and could always run to diamonds if he got into spade trouble.

If Jim had passed or raised diamonds immediately the chances are that North and South would get to four spades and wind up making five odd. They might still have found spades if South had doubled one space, but South elected to bid hearts and North raised him to game.

West opened a spade. South rose with dummy's ace and led a trump, but it did him no good. West grabbed the first heart, led a second spade which Jim ruffed. Jim led a diamond to his partner's ace, whereupon a second diamond ruff set the unfortunate declarer.

MARS: Christmas Star

effect, called precession, takes about 50,000 years to complete.

During this period, the Martian poles are tilted alternately toward and away from the sun. Sagan speculates that if Mars is now in "precessional winter," 12,000 years ago a massive south polar cap was tilted toward the sun in precessional spring.

Because the polar cap received more of the sun's energy, water and carbon dioxide locked in the ice may have melted, releasing great quantities of gas into the atmosphere and sending water rushing into the riverbeds.

Twelve-thousand years ago, Sagan theorizes, may have been a time of "balmy temperatures and soft nights" where the sound of running water was heard again on Mars.

If seasons are 12,000 years long on Mars, possible Martian organisms may hibernate during the long winter, much like animals do on Earth, except for thousands of years. When the spring thaw comes, life may emerge again.

The recipe for life on Mars, Sagan says, may simply be to "add water"! And that's exactly what Viking will do when it and a companion lander descend to the Martian surface next July.

Viking will extend a long arm, scoop up some red soil and dump it into a tube. Water will be added along with sunlight in hopes dormant micro-organisms may spring to life.

Scientists are trying not to be too optimistic about Viking's chances of finding life or its fossils on Mars. If it does, fine. It's accomplished its mission. If no life is found, that doesn't mean it does not, or has not ever existed there. It means Viking did not find it where it was asked to look.

The warning is being issued in hopes of avoiding the same kind of public disappointment caused when Comet Kohoutek, billed as the Comet of the Century, literally fizzled in 1974.

The Viking mission represents the first concerted effort to find life on a place other than Earth. It is an expensive mission, costing about $1 billion and has occupied the time of hundreds of scientists and engineers for many years.

Should the probe find life on Mars, it will prove, beyond reasonable doubt, that life in the universe is very common. We know life abounds here on Earth, but if we also find it on the first extra-terrestrial place we examine, its existence among the stars is a safe assumption.

Perhaps the most interesting part of the Viking mission is that it is designed to beam back crisp, clear and colorful panoramas of Mars for the average television viewer to enjoy. It's kind of a public relations gesture since we've all paid for the project.

So even if Viking doesn't find life, it still will provide some entertaining television for the July 4 holiday, if nothing else.

And Schiaparelli and Lowell, if they were only alive today, would be on the edge of their chairs, eyes glued to the screen and their thoughts millions of miles away.
